Abstract	The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fished product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquiescer les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

“How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?”

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

“Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?”

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1992 environmental status report on Canadian petroleum refinery effluents

By Marc St-Cyr. Ottawa : Environment Canada, Environmental Protection Service, 1995. xix, 95 p. : ill., Btbl. (Report / Canada. Environmental Protection Service ; EPS 1/PN/4) French ed. (Rapport environnemental sur les...): 96-04415/2. ISBN 0-660-16241-5 CCG-P no. En49-11/1-4E MICROLOG 96-05869 (2 fiche)

Provides an overview of refinery effluents from the Canadian petroleum refining industry and an assessment of the state of the oil industry's compliance with the federal Petroleum Refinery Effluent Regulations and Guidelines for 1992. Includes brief descriptions of the various processes used in the refining industry and a review of the effluent discharge requirements. Effluent discharges and degree of compliance are reported first for individual refineries, arranged by region, then for the five regions of Canada (Atlantic, Quebec, Ontario, Prairie and Northern, and Pacific and Yukon), and finally for Canada as a whole. Trends from 1975 to 1992 are also noted.

The 1993 spruce beetle damage survey

By Mike LeBlanc and Bob Guscott. Halifax : Dept. of Natural Resources, 1994. 16 p. : Maps (Insectary publications series / Nova Scotia. Dept. of Natural Resources ; no. 2) MICROLOG 96-06129 (1 fiche)

The spruce beetle is an insect native to Nova Scotia and is primarily an enemy of mature & over-mature spruce. In Nova Scotia the preferred host is white spruce, but all species of spruce can be attacked. This report gives a stand mortality rating with the no. of hectares affected, by county. It then provides a series of maps showing the locations of infestations.

1994 Nova Scotia visitor volume report

Halifax : Nova Scotia Economic Renewal Agency, Tourism Nova Scotia, Enquiry & Research Services Section, 1994. 81 p. : ill., Maps MICROLOG 96-06137 (1 fiche)

Presents measurements of visitor volume to Nova Scotia conducted over the May 15 to October 31 tourist season. The first section contains results of motor vehicle counts and includes travel to the province by automobile, bus, and recreational vehicle. Information presented includes vehicle volume by month, region of origin, and type of vehicle. The second section contains results of a survey of visitors who arrived by air, giving information on purpose of trip, length of stay, region of origin, and traveller party size. Also includes a fixed-roof accommodation report, which provides a survey of licensed properties and rooms, and information on accommodation demand by month, type, and region; and a campground report, which provides information on camping facilities and campground activity (including site-nights sold, registrations, and occupancy rates).

1996-97 estimates, part I : the government expenditure plan and highlights by ministry

Canada. Dept. of Finance. Ottawa : Supply & Services Canada, Canada Communication Group, Publishing, 1996. 48, 52 p. Bilingual (Budget des dépenses...). ISBN 0-660-59971-6 CCG-P no. BT31-2/1997-1 MICROLOG 96-05881 (2 fiche)

The estimates communicate to Parliament the level and nature of the federal government's spending plans for the coming fiscal year. Part I provides an overview of federal spending. It describes the relationship of the estimates to the expenditure plan (as set out in the budget), summarizes key elements of the main estimates and highlights the major year-over-year changes by department, agency and Crown corporation.

The main estimates, or Part II, is the document that directly supports the Appropriation Act. The basic structural units are the Votes and Statutory items which total the proposed expenditures under each departmental or agency program. Presentation of the estimates is by ministry, department and agency, with a statement of objectives for each program, and activity descriptions, transfer payments and revolving funds. Crown corporations are also presented. Data is shown for the previous year to provide a basis for comparison.

Calgary (Alta.). Parks/Recreation Dept. Calgary, AB : The Dept., 1996. iii, 45 p. : ill. MICROLOG 96-06357 (1 fiche)

This plan establishes a course of action for the Calgary Parks & Recreation Dept. in order to address significant social and financial challenges. The plan organises 80 targets into five goals: excellence in management and responsive to fiscal restraint; management and delivery of universally accessible core services; advocacy of individual wellness; advocacy and support of the development and management of attractive, liveable communities; and seeking and encouragement of interagency co-operative relationships that will contribute to effective and efficient delivery of leisure and recreation services. Specific strategies and actions are listed under each of these goals. Trends and issues affecting parks and recreation services (including population characteristics), departmental performance measures, and financial/human resource plans are also discussed.

By Herbert C. Northcott, Benjamin R. Northcott and Jonathan Murphy. Edmonton : Alberta Health, 1996. 95 p. : ill. MICROLOG 96-06147 (2 fiche)

Describes research methodology, profiles respondents, and presents results of a 1996 survey of 4,000 adult Albertans. The purpose of the survey was to assess progress towards a number of key performance measures identified in the Alberta Health business plan. Survey questions assessed self-reported health status and health needs, behavioural and lifestyle contributions to health, availability and accessibility of health care services, information received from health care providers, degree of satisfaction with the health care system, and variations by age, gender, and health region. Comparisons were also made with a similar survey conducted in 1995.

Abscisic acid-enhanced yield of cucumber and melon : final report

University of Saskatchewan. Dept. of Horticulture Science. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1996. 7 p. MICROLOG 96-06141 (1 fiche)

Saskatchewan currently produces a number of warm-season crops such as cucumbers, but lower summer temperatures combined with a short growing season threaten productivity and crop maturation. Preliminary studies have shown that application of abscisic acid can promote maturity and yield, making such treatment attractive for growing crops in short season growing areas such as Sas-catchewan. This report presents results of a field trial in which a randomised block design with four replicates was used with abscisic acid foliar sprayed treatments of cucumber and melon, field-applied at the 3-7 leaf stage after seedling establishment. Results report differences in growth and yield between the various treatments and the control treatment (water spraying).

Acute lethality and related contaminants in the Rainy River, downstream of two Boise Cascade kraft mill discharges : report

Prepared by: K. Flood...et al. Toronto : Environment Ontario, 1989. x, 65 p. : Maps, Bibl. ISBN 0-7729-5454-2
MICROLOG 96-06348 (1 fiche)

Presents an assessment of the acute effects of effluents from two pulp mills on fish caged in the Rainy River on the Ontario-Minnesota border. The test fish were brown trout (Salmo trutta) and fathead minnows (Pimephales promelas), placed in cages sited at pre-selected locations downstream from the mills. Dead fish were removed during the 96 hours of exposure, after which the remaining fish were sampled and analysed for chlorophenols. Water and effluent samples were also taken and analysed, and laboratory bioassays were undertaken to determine acute lethality of the effluents and a pulp mill toxicant, abietic acid. Results indicate whether the effluents pose any concern to fish health in the Rainy River system.

Under Ontario's Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement (MISA) program, there is a requirement for the province's metal mining sector to conduct laboratory toxicity tests to monitor its wastewater discharges for acute lethality to rainbow trout and Daphnia magna. This report is a compilation of the toxicity data for samples collected for the MISA monitoring year 1990-91, and for audit samples tested at the Ontario environment ministry laboratory in Rexdale. It also includes data from a few inspection samples taken 1990-91. Summaries of results are included for the following categories of operations: base metal mines, concentrators, and refiners; gold mines, concentrators, and smelters; iron mines; and uranium mines and refineries. Describes an air monitoring survey conducted at a refinery in Mississauga, Ontario using the mobile Trace Atmospheric Gas Analyzer (TAGA) to provide on-site, near real-time measurements of ambient air concentrations of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) during the operation of a mobile PCB destruction unit. The operation involved the decontamination of about 10,000 litres of transformer oil containing about 750 parts per million of PCBs. The investigators screened 283 two-minute air samples for selected PCBs during the survey. Results presented include levels of PCBs in air over time along with associated meteorological data.

Presents results of an air quality survey conducted in Thunder Bay in July 1985. The objective of the survey was to determine the concentrations of total reduced sulphur (TRS) downwind of the Great Lakes Forest Products kraft pulp mill and to determine the sulphur dioxide levels downwind of that company's sulphite mill, located adjacent to the kraft pulp mill. The investigators used a mobile air monitoring unit to measure TRS, sulphur dioxide, several meteorological parameters, and common pollutants such as nitrogen oxides, ozone, and carbon monoxide. Results presented include time-concentration plots for TRS, sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides, and several meteorological parameters; and tables of moving half-hour averages for all pollutants and parameters.

Amélioration de l'habitat du poisson au Nouveau-Brunswick 1988-90, 1991

L'objectif ultime des citoyens engagés dans la gestion responsable des ressources de pêche du Canada consiste à obtenir un gain net de la capacité de production. Cet objectif englobe trois buts et un principe directeur sous-entendant que les activités réalisées à l'intérieur ou à côté des cours d'eau n'entraîneront aucune perte nette de la capacité de production de l'habitat. Les trois buts en question sont la conservation, la restauration de l'habitat et l'amélioration ou l'établissement de l'habitat. La réalisation de ces trois buts vise l'accomplissement d'un plan de travail hautement intégré permettant une participation optimale de tous les intervenants de la région. Les sous-ensembles peuvent différer (légèrement ou grandement) selon la stratégie de mise en oeuvre discutée, mais l'orientation des quatre stratégies de mise en oeuvre de base décrites ci-dessous vise à inclure tout le monde. Il s'agit là d'un processus pour le moins complexe. Par conséquent, la meilleure façon de mesurer le succès et de la quantifier avec précision est de procéder par petites étapes en se concentrant séparément sur chacune des stratégies qui s'offrent. C'est précisément sur l'amélioration de l'habitat du poisson au Nouveau-Brunswick que se penche ce document.

Ce projet avait pour objectif d'appliquer une approche méthodologique pour la gestion des paysages naturels à l'échelle d'un grand territoire. Dans le contexte où la protection et la mise en valeur des paysages forestiers font partie des préoccupations grandissantes en aménagement du territoire, le projet devait permettre d'expérimenter une méthode et de fournir des outils relatifs à la gestion de ces paysages. Le projet s'est déroulé sur le territoire de l'Est-du-Lac Témiscouata qui présente une problématique intéressante pour l'aménagement des paysages. En effet, c'est un territoire de forêt privée, qui fait partie de la Forêt modèle du Bas-Saint-Laurent Inc., où les activités d'aménagement forestier sont omniprésentes et qui est à fort potentiel récréotouristique.

Ce document vise à présenter des mesures qui rendent compatibles la mise en valeur de la matière ligneuse et le maintien de la qualité visuelle des paysages. Selon les objectifs d'aménagement intégré définis pour un territoire donné, on peut définir différents niveaux d'objectifs de qualité visuelle (OQV) à atteindre. Ces OQV définissent un niveau d'altération acceptable du paysage selon la sensibilité qu'on lui accorde. Le contenu de ce guide de mise en valeur vise à sensibiliser les différents intervenants du milieu à l'impact visuel potentiel de différentes pratiques d'aménagement forestier et à fournir des éléments de réflexion pour la prise en compte des paysages. Le guide vise à proposer des approches et des solutions qui devront être adaptées selon les différents contextes.

The work also evaluated the use of early ultrasound measurements as a predictor of the rate of fat deposition, developed appropriate equations to predict carcass lean meat yields from live ultrasound measurements taken on steers and bulls, and assisted in technology transfer to commercialise this technology.

Au Canada, la répartition des gains annuels est devenue plus inégale au cours des années 80 chez les salariés de sexe masculin et les femmes employées à temps plein toute l'année. Dans ce document, nous posons les trois questions suivantes : 1) même après la prise en compte des effets cycliques, les nouvelles périodes de faible salaire durent-elles aujourd'hui plus longtemps que par le passé; 2) une fois qu'il a commencé une nouvelle période de faible salaire, un travailleur de sexe masculin gagne-t-il aujourd'hui un salaire annuel réel plus faible qu'au milieu des années 70; 3) l'inégalité des gains en longue période s'est-elle accentuée dans les années 80?

Presents results of an inventory conducted to establish a comprehensive aspen stand classification for east central Alberta. Describes methods used for selecting sample plots and analysing sample data. Six aspen-dominated vegetation types are discerned and differentiated using common and relatively durable (grazing-tolerant) plant species. This is followed by a key for identifying these six aspen vegetation types, a detailed environmental and vegetation description of each type, a summary of type characteristics, a comparison with other classifications, and a summary of analyses on associated data. Conclusions are drawn related to both future productivity sampling within Alberta's Northeast Region Benchmark Program (initiated to collect basic ecological data on native rangelands) and other potential uses of the classification.

Presents the approach and findings of a study undertaken to evaluate the United States Environmental Protection Agency's CTA (Comprehensive Technical Assistance) protocol as a tool for addressing and resolving performance limiting factors at Ontario sewage treatment plants. Begins with a review of details of the origins and background of the Agency's Comprehensive Performance Evaluation, of which CTA is the second component, then overviews the selection of three candidate sites for the study. Provides information on the CTA team selection and training. In addition to an overview of the CTA methodology and of how site-specific process control manuals were prepared by plant staff to document procedures. Summarises results of the CTAs at the three sewage treatment plants selected for study. The appendix includes detailed CTA reports of CTA evaluations, modifications, and operating results before and after CTA program implementation at the plants.

A small percentage of the total radiocarbon produced by the experimental reactors at Chalk River Laboratories has been vented from the main reactor stack and atmospherically dispersed. This report presents results of surveys conducted in 1982-83 and 1993-94 to measure levels of carbon-14 in the atmosphere and vegetation at the Chalk River site. In addition to reporting on the collection and analysis of atmospheric and vegetative samples, the report presents comparisons of short-term (two weeks or less) and whole-season data, comparison of different vegetation species, and comparison of day versus night sampling. A dispersion factor was calculated on the basis of recent in-stack monitoring. Data from the study have also been used to test the suitability of tree rings as passive biomonitors of long-term reactor operations.

During 1993 and 1994, the former Investment Canada and the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade hosted four roundtable discussions with the CEOs and other senior managers of Canadian subsidiaries of multinational corporations. The roundtables had two objectives; to acquire a sense of what Canadian subsidiaries face competing for world or North American mandates, and to learn from the experiences of those CEOs who have won mandates of their Canadian subsidiaries, how best to do so. This guide is intended to capture that practical advice and to share it with the managers of other Canadian subsidiaries. Additional information is provided through a number of short case studies in the latter part of the guide.

Beyond intellectual property : toward traditional resource rights for indigenous peoples and local communities

MICROLOG 96-06423 (5 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

The concept of traditional resource rights (TRR) reflects the necessity of rethinking the limited and limiting concept of intellectual property rights (IPR). The TRR concept can accommodate a wide range of relevant international agreements as a basis for a sui-generis system of protection for indigenous peoples and their intellectual, natural, and technological resources. This book introduces the TRR concept in a manner organised around a series of questions that might emerge in a community when a visitor arrives to collect information or cultural or biogenetic materials. Each chapter begins with a summary of the main issues it addresses and ends with options and suggested actions. Issues discussed include who benefits from traditional resources, the rights of communities to approve or resist commercialisation, types of potential legal action, the applicability of traditional IPR, development of community systems for protecting TRR, the use of binding or non-binding international agreements, and TRR funding. Examples are included of creative strategies and unique solutions that indigenous communities have developed for protecting and benefiting from TRR.

The objectives of this study were to: characterise breeding bird communities in the grasslands around Riske Creek, Chilcotin Region, British Columbia; determine distribution and density of long-billed curlews in the Chilcotin-Cariboo grasslands; identify associations between grassland habitat characteristics, food resource availability, and grassland bird diversity, and species abundances; and elucidate the potential effects of livestock grazing on grassland breeding birds and their habitats. The investigators established 13 study sites around Riske Creek and used point counts and spot-mapping methods to census birds. They measured the following habitat characteristics: vegetation height, vertical cover, and patchiness; horizontal cover of different physiognomic features; arthropod abundances; and site slope, aspect, and elevation. Season, intensity, and duration of grazing by livestock and bighorn sheep were also determined and behavioural observations were made of the use of different structures by birds. Correlations between birds and grazing indicated which species were either positively or negatively associated with grazing.

The Canadian strategic forecast, 1996 : the military in modern democratic society

The 1996 annual autumn seminar of the Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies (CISS) has selected "The Military in modern democratic society" as their theme. The topic is presented in three phases. The first phase will cover civil-military relations. This has been much in the news of late, especially on matters such as civilian control of the military, and Defence's share of the federal budget. The role of the citizen as defender of his or her country as a member of the military is a key to effective armed forces in democracies. The Canadian tradition in peacetime has historically focused on the reserves, and the militia in particular. This topic will be addressed in phase two. The third phase of our seminar will deal with three topics that generated considerable discussion by those both in and out of uniform when they were first launched by the Canadian Forces, and to some extent they remain controversial today. Two of the programs (French Canadians and the Canadian Armed Forces and Women in the Canadian Forces) were launched by the Canadian Forces in its role as an organization that should both defend and exemplify the nation. The third one (The Canadian Forces Deployment Stress Management Program) is a necessary response to the stresses put on service personnel, and on their families, arising from the uncertainty of defence cutbacks and the long periods away from home on peacekeeping and other operations.

The first three documents in this volume originate from reports compiled by censorship boards who examined communications during World War II. They are compiled with material written during 1942-44 and provide an understanding of the actual situation and the development of the problems encountered by the Jewish communities in Europe, as well as the international negotiations conducted with a view to aiding them and creating a national homeland in Palestine. The fourth document is a summary of an interview with a Jewish employee of the Argentine Embassy in Prague who managed to escape from Europe to Buenos Aires in 1943. It is an account of the political, economic, and social conditions that prevailed in a country under Nazi domination.

This study covers the first thirty years of the office of the Chief of Defence Staff (CDS), 1964-94, with the objective of examining the influence of the office of the CDS on defence policy through the perspective of all the officers who have held the position. The first chapters trace the main points of the history of national command of the military and highlight important themes and ideas that helped to convince the Minister of Defence and others that Canada needed a single chief of defence. The following chapters examine the CDS chiefs as a class and explore their relationships to politicians, other officers, and public servants; how the changing organisation of the defence establishment and its association with the central agencies of government affected the power, if not the authority, and decisions of chiefs of defence. In chapters dealing with the CDS as commander and strategist, certain aspects of the general military history of the first chapter are examined in greater detail.

To maintain a growing demand for wheat starch, it is desirable that uses other than food be explored. This paper presents a new technology for converting wheat starch into useful chemicals, based on the direct low-temperature enzyme hydrolysis of insoluble starch particles. Experiments are described in which various varieties of alpha-amylases were evaluated in terms of their ability to directly hydrolyse starch to soluble dextrins and glucose. The results presented include the optimum combination of amylase type and operating conditions.

Colony Farm land use plan

Colony Farm Land Use Study Steering Committee (B.C.). Coquitlam, BC : The Committee, 1995. i, 53 p. : Ill., Maps
MICROLOG 96-06331 (1 fiche)

Colony Farm, established in 1904 and abandoned in 1983, covers about 583 acres between Coquitlam and Port Coquitlam, British Columbia. It has remained undeveloped and used only for livestock grazing, with parts of the land having turned into valuable habitat for wildlife. Passive recreation is the predominant land use at the farm. This report reviews the Farm's history, land use and resource values, adjacent land use, land use policies governing the Farm lands, and the themes and issues revealed through public consultations on the future of the Farm lands. It then presents a land use plan for the Farm, beginning with an overall goal and land use principles. Elements of the plan include designation of parts of the lands for environmentally sensitive agriculture, wildlife habitat, and passive recreation; improving public access; conducting research on integrated management of the area; and plan implementation. Potential benefits and costs of the plan are also analysed.

Summarises research conducted to determine how the impacts of effluents produced by pulp mills and sewage plants in northern Alberta interact to potentially produce a variety of effects on downstream aquatic biota. The investigators carried out experiments in artificial streams using pulp mill and sewage effluent from a kraft mill on the Athabasca River near Hinton, Alberta. Using a 2x2 factorial design, mayflies were exposed to either low or high levels of effluent concentration, levels typical of what benthic invertebrates are likely to experience in some benthic microhabitats downstream of Hinton during the winter. Results of the two-week experiment are presented, including degree of mayfly survival for each of the effluent treatments.

This paper proposes that the federal government should have a contingency plan ready to use if the next Quebec referendum ends in a yes vote. The goal of such a plan must be to set clear ground rules for Quebec secession in advance to ensure that it respects the rule of law. The paper begins with an examination of the international experience with secession movements, reviewing the extent to which the constitutions of various nation-states provide for the possibility of referendums on secession. It identifies commonly accepted approaches that have produced peaceful and democratic outcomes. The second section builds on this comparative analysis, setting out ten principles which the authors believe should govern the secession of a province and proposing rules to deal with such issues as the majority that must be obtained in a referendum, which border questions should be resolved, and whether the referendum should be held nationally. The third section considers how the federal government might implement the proposed principles.

It begins with an introduction to the new South Africa, its socio-economic situation, demographics, and potential as an emerging market. The report then reviews the country's computer hardware industry, including prominent companies, market trends, subsectors, revenues by hardware category, and specific growth areas. A section on exploiting market opportunities offers a profile of hardware customers and distribution channels. The subsequent sections profile South Africa as a trading partner, giving trade statistics and information on market openness and barriers to trade, and assess South Africa as a place to do business, with information on such matters as banking, infrastructure, human resources, legal system, and patents/copyrights. The appendix includes directories of useful Canadian and South African contacts.

A revised and updated version of a 1965 taxonomic guide to decapod crustaceans of eastern Canada offshore areas. Data are from examination of about 33,000 specimens of some 60 species collected 1946-60, mostly as incidental catch in trawl surveys. Begins with a key to decapod suborders and families, historical notes on decapod studies, collection methods used, and a review of the hydrography of the study areas. The guide is arranged by suborders and families. Information for each species includes field identification, taxonomy, geographic distribution, specimen measurements, and related species or parasites if applicable. Includes index of scientific names.

Presents results from a study whose primary objective was to collect and analyse surficial sediment and high-quality, well described sediment cores for use in defining the depositional history of sediment-bound contaminants in the western basin of Great Slave Lake. The analysis includes those contaminants which have known atmospheric or upstream point sources. Core dating was accomplished by using lead and caesium methods; the geochronological results were used to determine sedimentation rates and time scales, and the suitability of the cores for subsequent contaminant analyses. Contaminants studied include organochlorine compounds such as dioxins and furans, pesticides, and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons.

Reviews experiments conducted as part of a four-year project established for the development of an in-vitro fertilisation (IVF) program at the University of Saskatchewan. Project objectives included development of a practical and competitive embryo production system that will facilitate and encourage the export of large numbers of beef and dairy cattle embryos from western Canada. Subjects of experiments included in-vitro maturation and culture, factors affecting capacitation and fertilisability of bull semen, characteristics of oocyte complexes, the survival rate of IVF embryos after freezing and thawing, viral contamination of bovine oocytes collected from commercial abattoirs, effects of serum handling on maturation and fertilisation of bovine oocytes, vitrification behaviour of cryoprotectants, and application of IVF technology for production of embryos for transfer in the field.

Compiles presentations from a seminar held to broaden the policy debate in the run-up to the 1995 G-7 Summit in Halifax, Nova Scotia, whose theme was the reform of international financial institutions. The seminar focused on the views of developing countries and their increasingly important role in a rapidly changing global environment, as a counterweight to the industrial-power biases of the United States, Europe, and Japan. The compilation begins with a summary of the seven core presentations and an examination of the principal outcomes of the Halifax Summit that contrasts these outcomes with the conclusions of the seminar. The topics of the core presentations include the eclipse of the G-7, the governance and financing of international institutions, a proposed transformation of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) into a world central bank, bias in the governance of the IMF, the kinds of global financial institutions needed for the 21st century, financing long-term development in sub-Saharan Africa, and multilateral co-operation for development. Summaries of the discussions of these presentations are also included.

Development manual for return-to-work programs

Regina : Workers' Compensation Board, 1996. vii, 75 p.
MICROLOG 96-06044 (1 fiche)

The ultimate objective of Return-to-Work (RTW) programs in Saskatchewan is to help injured workers return to meaningful employment as soon as medically possible. This objective is achieved in part by following a RTW plan designed specifically for a particular injured worker. This manual assists in the development of such a plan, taking into account the nature of the injury, any medical restrictions, and the type of work performed before the injury. The manual also serves to help establish a workplace RTW program. Sections of the manual cover preliminary steps including workforce involvement and organising a joint RTW committee; designing a RTW program, including reviewing accident histories, conducting job task analyses, organising a RTW team, and program evaluation/assessment; processes to follow when a workplace injury occurs; and maintenance of individual files. Appendices include job task analysis guidelines, accident investigation procedures, sample forms, and examples of RTW programs.

Development of a rapid test for detection of oestrogen in urine from pregnant mares : final report

By Deborah Haines. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1995. 21 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 96-06234 (1 fiche)

Western Canada is the centre of the pregnant mare urine (PMU) industry, an industry based on the collection and extraction of oestrogen from PMU for subsequent use in cosmetics and hormone replacement therapy. Payment for PMU to producers is based on the quantity of oestrogen in the urine, yet producers and researchers have had no access to information concerning oestrogen levels other than crude grades assigned by the pharmaceutical company buyers. This paper reports on a project conducted to develop a quantitative immunologic test for the rapid measurement of oestrogen in PMU. The test uses a competitive enzyme linked immunosorbent assay based on a monoclonal antibody specific for the conjugated oestrogens which occur in urine specimens. The assay will enable producers and researchers to improve pregnant mare oestrogen production by identifying factors that affect oestrogen production.

The objectives of the project described in this report were to produce breeding lines of a flax with high levels of palmitic fatty acid in a solin (low linolenic fatty acid) background and that had a distinct seed colour, and to increase the palmitic level along with its related fatty acid (palmitoleic) in this material. The investigators made end crosses among agronomically superior solin lines, high palmitic lines, and mottled-seed coloured lines. Results of yield, oil content, and fatty acid content are presented for chamber-grown and field-raised seed.

Describes a study conducted to identify the effects upon survival, embryonic development, hatching success, and quality of larvae of bull trout and mountain whitefish eggs incubated at various levels of hypoxia at low water temperature. Each dissolved oxygen treatment (at five different concentrations) was replicated three times for whitefish and once for bull trout. Dissolved oxygen and water temperature were monitored daily and egg mortality and hatching were recorded at least three times per week. At several intervals during embryonic development, the oxygen consumption, residual oxygen levels, egg and alevin weights and lengths were recorded from the bull trout; cardiac rates and measurements of egg and yolk size, and of eye diameter and interorbital distance, were obtained for whitefish. Following hatch, thermal tolerance of bull trout and feeding success and thermal tolerance of whitefish from each dissolved oxygen treatment were examined. Detailed results of these observations are included.

Forest fire managers must be able to predict the normal variation in fine fuel moisture around the clock, since it is a critical factor that affects the behaviour and control of wildfires and prescribed burns. The Canadian Forest Fire Weather Index System contains a Fine Fuel Moisture Code (FFMC) that produces a standard daily index of expected fine fuel moisture at the mid-afternoon peak of fire danger, but does not output normal diurnal variation in FFMC. This paper documents the development and updating of an earlier model of diurnal variation in FFMC, presents the underlying equations and a lookup table, and announces the availability of a computer program version of the model for various user applications.

This document contains the business plans of 21 Ontario government ministries or offices, each plan having the following common format: a minister's message setting out goals and how they link with the government's guiding principles; core businesses; key strategies to explain how the ministry is making changes to those core businesses; and proposed performance measures. ### Drawing on our inner strength : Canada's economic citizenship in an era of evolving federalism

This commentary focuses on the means available to preserve and enhance the Canadian economic union in the context of evolving federalism. In particular, it examines the extent to which the underpinnings of this economic citizenship are being modified by the globalisation of trade and the trend toward the decentralisation of power and the disentanglement of responsibilities between the federal and provincial governments. It explores how policies and institutions affecting the Canadian economic union can respond effectively to these changes. The first section summarises the importance for Canadians of citizenship in a common economic union and reviews some key institutions underpinning the functioning of that union, including the Agreement on Internal Trade. The second section addresses challenges to the management of that union, and the third section proposes some basic operational principles to deal with those challenges.

This report is one of a series of site-specific fire histories being developed for red oak-pine ecosystems in central Ontario. It presents a fire history from old white pine stumps for an oak-mixed hardwood-conifer stand near Seguin Falls, Ontario, for the period 1656 to 1861. The causes of fires observed during the period are also discussed.

Ontario's Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement (MISA) initiative is intended to achieve virtual elimination of toxic contaminants in municipal and industrial discharges to waterways. MISA includes development of regulations which will specify effluent monitoring requirements and effluent limits. Since compliance with these regulations will have costs for industry, information related to the financial impact of compliance is of interest to the Ministry of the Environment. This report summarises a study of the economic and financial state of one of the industrial sectors which will be subject to MISA requirements: electric power utilities, with a focus on Ontario Hydro. It includes information and statistics on the utility sector in Canada and Ontario, generating capacities, the regulatory environment and rate setting, electric power production, industry trends, financial performance, sector's current level of compliance with environmental objectives.

Provides estimates of capital and operating costs for each of five key pollution monitoring activities at Ontario's seven iron and steel plants who are direct dischargers subject to the Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement monitoring requirements. The five activities include sampling, discharge characterisation and routine analysis, toxicity testing, flow measurement, and reporting. The cost estimates include costs provided by the plants through an industry representative. Financial impacts of the estimated monitoring costs on the iron and steel sector are analysed using historical financial data for 1981-87. Potential benefits to the firms of the monitoring regulation are also noted.

Presents results of a review by a committee established to examine issues related to preparing, regulating, and utilising health providers effectively in Saskatchewan. The committee used various methods to carry out its work, including an extensive review of the literature, a workshop on health provider human resources, presentations by key resource people, consultations with interested and affected groups, and research into specific aspects of health human resources. Issues considered include the desired characteristics of health providers; trends affecting health provider organisations and their members; changes needed in health provider educational programs; barriers limiting full utilisation of health provider skills; duplication of resources; community involvement; and the need to focus on health promotion and prevention of health problems.

The purpose of the review is to assist in development of the Public Legal Education and Information (PLEI) - Crime Prevention component of the Community Safety and Crime Prevention Initiative at Dept. of Justice Canada. The review is in six sections: an introduction explaining the rationale for the review and the range of data sources used; an exploration of the roles of PLEI and Crime Prevention, as well as a psychological premise for persuasion, resistance, and attitude change; four sections describing 20 programs for youth in and out of school which apply different behaviour modification approaches, and eight adult behaviour modification programs which apply three different approaches; and a discussion of the effective components of these programs. An annotated bibliography is appended.

Prepared by: Andrew L. Allen... et al. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1995. 55 p. : Bibl. On cover: Final report.

A syndrome affecting new-born foals results in full term foals with signs of immaturity. Affected foals are believed to be hypothyroid at birth based on low blood levels of thyroid hormones and a poor response to thyroid stimulating hormone. Such foals are referred to as congenitally hypothyroid and dysmature (CHD). The objectives of the study described in this report were to have pregnant mares carry their foals to term following foetal surgery, with or without removal of most of the foetal thyroid gland, and to document the effects of thyroid gland removal on the growth and development of the equine foetus. The investigators bred 25 mares, of which 21 underwent surgery (7 sham-operated controls and 14 subjected to thyroid removal) and 6 carried foals to term. Results compare the gestation, characteristics, and behaviour of the surgically created hypothyroid foals to those of spontaneously occurring CHD foals seen in western Canada. Other investigations identified CHD risk factors in the environment and diet of pregnant mares.

Previous studies have shown that by releasing juvenile salmon at optimum time and size, survival rates and size of returning salmon may be improved. This report presents results of a study conducted to assess the simultaneous effects of time and size at release of chinook salmon on their subsequent survival, growth, age at maturity, and catch distribution. The goal was to determine the optimal release conditions at the Quinsam River Hatchery (east coast of Vancouver Island) where the salmon were released. The investigators released juveniles of three size groups from the hatchery on each of four different dates in 1982 and again in 1983. The study was conducted over two brood years to examine the annual (brood-year) variability in the effects of time and size at release.

Efficiency of a negative ionization system on dust settling in a confinement swine building : final report

By Akihiro Tanaka and Yuanhui Zhang. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1996. 96 p. : Ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-06126 (2 fiche)

A principal problem within a swine building environment is the high dust concentration, which can lead to such problems as respiratory disorders and deterioration of equipment. This paper describes a study of a method to control dust in swine buildings using negative ionization. The investigators tested the performance of a negative ionisation system in two identical swine grower/finisher rooms, an experiment and a control. The system, installed only in the experimental room, consisted of an ion generator and ten sets of ion emitters. Experiments lasted 7 weeks (short term) and 11 weeks (long term), and dust concentrations in the two rooms were compared. Statistical analysis was used to determine the effect of the ionisation system on dust concentration and on swine performance. The effect of ventilation on dust concentration was also noted.

The EnerGuide Program is designed to help consumers choose home appliances that are energy efficient. The Program has two goals: to protect the environment by reducing the demand for electricity in Canada, and to help consumers spend less money on electricity. Seven categories of appliances have been tested and rated under the program according to their electricity consumption: refrigerators, freezers, cooking appliances, dishwashers, clothes washers, clothes dryers, and combination washer-dryers. The test results allow comparison of the electricity consumption used by appliance models with similar features, when they are operated under the same conditions. Information in the guide includes appliance brand and label number, other identifying characteristics such as capacity, and yearly energy consumption in kilowatt hours. For dishwashers, hot water consumption is also given.

Examines recent trends in end-use energy consumption in Canada, identifying and analysing the factors that have caused changes in the demand for energy. Also develops indicators of energy efficiency improvements, using a factorisation method to determine the contribution of energy efficiency to changes in end-use (secondary) energy use. Such a method allows an assessment of the underlying changes in energy intensity for each end-use sector and permits distinguishing the effect of changes in energy intensity on energy use from changes in economic growth and changes in the mix of energy-using products or activities. Economy-wide trends are described first, followed by sections on energy efficiency trends in the residential, commercial, industrial, and transportation sector. The final section analyses factors influencing growth in energy use in each sector 1990-94. Appendices include a description of the methodology and data sources for the factorisation analysis, as well as a glossary.

Enhancing access to information : RD/AD success stories

As financial resources available to government organisations decline, fresh approaches in the administration of freedom of information (FOI) programs are critical. Adopting a culture of openness through the routine disclosure and active dissemination (RD/AD) of general records is one approach that advances open government and makes access to information better, quicker, and cheaper. This document presents 11 success stories demonstrating that a successful access strategy using RD/AD can be done with minimal resources yet achieve maximum positive benefits for the public and for the staff who are involved with FOI. The stories come from municipal, regional, and provincial governments. A summary of RD/AD tips is also included, giving some practical ideas on how RD/AD can be entrenched into the daily operations of an organisation and help to foster a culture of openness.

En 1992, le Conseil consultatif sur la condition de la femme au N.-B. a publié, par l'intermédiaire de son Bureau de la promotion des femmes en affaires, une étude sur les femmes entrepreneurs au Nouveau-Brunswick. En organisant environ 400 entrevues par téléphone et 100 rencontres personnelles, l'étude a pu fournir un profil des femmes entrepreneurs et de leurs entreprises : 45 % des femmes entrepreneures ne retirent aucun revenu de leur entreprise, 94 % d'entre elles se disent très satisfaites de leur rôle d'entrepreneure, 66 % sont propriétaires uniques de l'entreprise. Alors que l'étude nous a procuré des renseignements précieux, elle nous a aussi amené à poser la question suivante : comment la situation des femmes entrepreneures diffère-t-elle de celle des hommes entrepreneurs? Ce document présente les résultats de cette étude comparative des femmes et des hommes en affaires au Nouveau-Brunswick.

L'évaluation environnementale est-elle utile et pertinente? Favorise-t-elle le développement durable au Canada? A-t-elle pour effet de réduire ou de prévenir la pollution? Protège-t-elle la biodiversité? Les écosystèmes essentiels à la prospérité des générations actuelles et futures de Canadiens sont-ils mieux sauvegardés? L'évaluation environnementale aide-t-elle les décideurs à prendre des décisions éclairées en tirant des indications valides sur les effets environnementaux probables des projets et des politiques? Ce rapport répond à ces questions pour le Canada. Il résume les effets visant à mettre en place des processus d'évaluation environnementale utiles et pertinents qui contribuent au développement durable. Il brosse également un tableau sommaire des réalisations, des défis et des orientations futures de l'évaluation environnementale au Canada.

The Bush River Trial Site, located 112 kilometres north-west of Golden, British Columbia, was established in 1986 to study the changes in vegetation over time following the application of selected vegetation management techniques. This report presents the results of vegetation, wildlife forage, and berry production data collection, and the statistical analyses of those data. The treatments included application of herbicides, manual brushing, and no treatment (control).

Selective reduction of one surface of a high lead containing piezoelectric ceramic wafer produces a stress-biased wafer with a unique domed structure that leads to high electromechanical displacement and enhanced load-bearing capability. These ceramics, known as rainbow ceramics, are promising materials for actuators and some types of transducers. This report presents a characterisation of the dielectric, piezoelectric, and hydrostatic properties of a number of lead lanthanum zirconate titanate (PLZT) based rainbow ceramics. Samples had a nominal thickness of 0.48 millimetres and were electroded with silver paint; some of them were glued to 1-millimetre thick brass or stainless steel discs. Results presented include material constants from resonance measurements, dielectric measurements, values of the piezoelectric charge constant, and response of the PLZT ceramic to hydrostatic pressure. Comparisons are also made with properties of bulk PLZT.

Cette étude a pour objet d'analyser l'évolution à long terme des disparités régionales au Canada sur le plan du revenu et de la production par habitant à la lumière des études existantes portant sur la convergence. Cette analyse vise deux objectifs. Premièrement, nous allons tenter d'expliquer la contradiction apparente entre les résultats d'études récentes sur la convergence et l'opinion pessimiste qui prévalait au début des années 80. Deuxièmement, l'évolution de la structure des écarts régionaux peut fournir un indice du cadre théorique nécessaire pour expliquer les tendances de la croissance régionale au Canada.

Ce rapport est le premier document d'une série d'examen annuels des tendances en matière d'efficacité énergétique dans les secteurs d'utilisation finale de l'énergie au Canada. Ces examens ont pour objectif de suivre les tendances en matière d'efficacité énergétique et de tracer le profil des changements qui s'opèrent dans la consommation d'énergie et les émissions de gaz à effet de serre. Le chapitre 1 brosse un tableau global de l'efficacité énergétique, présente le cadre de l'étude et décrit le lien entre la consommation d'énergie et les émissions de dioxyde de carbone. Le chapitre 2 passe en revue l'incidence de l'efficacité énergétique sur la consommation d'énergie secondaire. Les chapitres 3 à 6 donnent une perspective détaillée sur les tendances sectorielles de la consommation d'énergie au cours de la dernière aux répercussions de l'efficacité énergétique. Le chapitre 7 porte surtout sur l'évolution de la consommation d'énergie dans les quatre secteurs d'utilisation finale de l'énergie depuis 1990, période qui fera l'objet des examens annuels ultérieurs.

Nous nous attendons à ce que les adolescents ayant subi des mauvais traitements soient plus susceptibles que les autres d'avoir des comportements à risque. Au total, 142 élèves de niveau secondaire inscrits à un projet de prévention du décrochage scolaire ou dans des classes ordinaires ont participé à l'étude. Ces adolescents ont rempli des questionnaires sur les mauvais traitements dont ils avaient été victimes, leur niveau actuel d'adaptation comportementale et sociale, leurs comportements à risque, leurs antécédents familiaux et leur milieu familial.

This report represents an opinion of likely future development in the basins for the next 25 years, assuming relatively stable economic conditions. The methodological approach included a review of economic reports and statistical data relating to northern Alberta and the basinal region, a review of industry-specific report, and selected interviews with industry representatives. The report first presents an economic overview of the region and then focuses on four key economic sectors in its projection of likely development: agriculture, energy, forestry, and manufacturing.

Free-electron lasers (FELs) are coherent sources of electromagnetic radiation in which the lasing medium is an electron beam. Compared to conventional lasers, they are broadly tuneable, can produce high peak power, have a broad wavelength range, and have favourable pulse and beam characteristics. The IMPELA family of high-power electron accelerators developed by Atomic Energy of Canada have characteristics that appear favourable for generation of far infrared radiation in a FEL configuration. This report describes the basic principles of FELs, the equations governing FEL characteristics, possible applications of FEL technology, and a conceptual design of a FEL based on the IMPELA technology. Recommendations are made regarding IMPELA modifications and establishment of a multi-user far infrared FEL facility that could enhance a range of Candu-related research and development activities and create new scientific opportunities for university-based researchers.

Recent oceanographic investigations of the Halifax Harbour inlet have addressed many of the environmental issues associated with the discharge of treated municipal wastes. This report reviews previous modelling studies of the harbour and interprets their conclusions in the light of the most recent information, with respect to issues raised in the terms of reference for the Halifax-Dartmouth Metropolitan Sewage Treatment Facility Environmental Assessment Report. Where appropriate, new analysis is performed to address the more specific project design information or to address specific issues not previously considered. The goal is to provide a consistent description of both present-day water quality in the harbour and to predict water quality under various sewage treatment and loading conditions. The final synthesis discusses results of previous work and new work in light of such water quality criteria as faecal coliform, suspended solids, and metal concentrations, and with regard to specific concerns such as extreme storms and system failures.

Financial assurance would be required either to ensure that pollution control objectives are complied with by a specified deadline or to ensure that funds are available for future cleanup and remediation of landfill sites. This guide is intended as a reference regarding how financial assurance should be administered under different circumstances. The guide contains the following: text of Act Part 12, sections 131-136 and 176; procedural guidelines covering such matters as forms of financial assurance, procedures for administering cash or bond agreements, periodic reviews, and conditions contributing to a default; summary statistics of active financial assurance accounts; a worked example illustrating the determi-

Presents findings of a study assessing the options for phasing in competition in Ontario's electricity system. Begins with an outline of the existing structure of the electricity system, focusing on Ontario Hydro, then discusses the major economic, technological, and public policy trends that are creating pressures for change in the structure of Ontario's electricity system. Changes are recommended which are considered necessary to introduce competition and which will result in a new electricity system for the province. The recommendations fall under the following categories: system access, the electricity marketplace, power transmission, power generation, power distribution, and legislation and regulation. The financial and electricity rate impacts of the proposed reforms are analysed. The final two sections address issues heard during a consultative process that formed a central part of the study, and Include an outline of the transitional steps required to introduce changes in all segments of Ontario's electricity system. The appendix includes a detailed financial and electricity rate impact analysis.

Ce document traite du développement de l'idée qu'on doit restreindre le rôle de l'État et comment on est arrivé à ce point. Ensuite, on traite des thèmes suivants: les possibilités à la gauche; comment distinguer la droite de la gauche; pourquoi l'État est nécessaire (relatif aux politiques économiques et pour la réglementation des marchés); les arguments par lesquels on justifie les compressions des dépenses publiques (notamment en ce qui concerne les services publics et les programmes sociaux); limites à l'imposition des taxes; régler la question des déficits.

Documents the portrayal of women and men in Canadian English language television coverage of the 1994 Lillehammer Olympic Games. The major focus is on CTV's coverage, with extension to ads within this coverage and to reports on the Olympics in regular news and sportscasts on CBLT and CFTO. The sample examined includes 148 hours of broadcasting, virtually all CTV coverage between 6 a.m. and midnight during the 15 days of the Winter Games. Issues examined include the coverage of women's and men's events, the people interviewed during the programs, special features broadcast during the games, journalists, commercials, and Olympic coverage in regular news and sportscasts.

By James E. Thomson. Toronto : Dept. of Mines, 1954. iii, 25 p. : ill., Bibl. Published as vol. LXII, part IV, of the Ontario Dept. of Mines annual report, 1953. Fold. map not filmed. MICROLOG 96-05849 (1 fiche)

This report represents the Ontario Dept. of Mines's first attempt to make a detailed study of the Keweenaw rocks on the Ontario side of the Lake Superior basin. The study area lies about 60 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie and has been extensively explored for copper mineralisation. The report describes the area's exploration history, topography, general geology (Keweenaw series volcanics, sediments, and intrusives, Cambrian sandstone, and recent deposits), structural geology (folding, faulting, fracturing), and economic geology. A table of analyses of copper in some rock samples and descriptions of copper deposits and occurrences are included. NR ON PR SC

Geology of the Sudbury Basin : glowing avalanche deposits of the Sudbury Basin : The Copper Cliff rhyolite in McKim Township, District of Sudbury

By James E. Thomson, Howell Williams and T.C. Phemister. Toronto : Dept. of Mines, 1957. v, 121 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. Published as vol. LXV, part III, of the Ontario Dept. of Mines annual report, 1956. Fold. maps not filmed. MICROLOG 96-06282 (2 fiche)

The area described in this report covers about 280 square miles lying within the boundaries of the Sudbury nickel intrusive, with comparison of rock formations within the intrusive and those lying immediately to the south. The first part of the report begins with a review of the wide variety of opinion concerning the rocks within the intrusive, the history of mining in the basin, and the interior basin topography. It then describes the area's general geology (mainly the Precambrian volcanic and sedimentary rocks and their correlations), structural geology (folding, faulting, shearing, and the overall fundamental structure of the basin), suggested geologic history, and economic geology. The first part concludes with a description of some copper-lead-zinc mines and properties. The second part details the glowing avalanche type of volcanic deposits found in the basin and to the south, and discusses their importance for interpreting the history of the basin. The third part discusses the Copper Cliff rhyolite, found throughout the basin and forming a barrier between rocks on either side. Details are included on rock characteristics, presence in various formations, structural relations, adjacent rocks, and the intrusive nature of the rhyolite. NR ON PR SC

Les bons d'études, les écoles à charte, les écoles sélectives, les palmarès sont autant d'éléments de cette redéfinition. La 2<sup>e</sup> partie aborde un autre niveau, celui de l'établissement. Les réformes proposées touchent l'autonomie institutionnelle et les responsabilités du personnel et de la direction. Dans la 3<sup>e</sup> partie, l'auteur tente de définir les principaux éléments d'un projet démocratique, dans le contexte canadien et québécois. On précise les protections constitutionnelles, et les rôles respectifs de l'État, des commissions scolaires, des écoles et du personnel.

A Guide to constitutional negotiations in Canada

By Paul Murray. Toronto : Ontario Legislative Library, Legislative Research Service, 1996. 28 p. : Bibl. (Current issue paper / Ontario. Legislative Library ; no. 176 ISSN 0835-0299)
MICROLOG 96-06194 (1 fiche)

Constitutional negotiations in Canada have been ongoing at one level or another for over 30 years. If past failures in such negotiations are to be avoided, participants will need to understand the issues to be addressed and why agreement has not been reached in the past. This paper attempts to provide such information, beginning with an explanation of the constitutional framework of Canada and its two most important documents, the Constitution Acts of 1867 and 1982. The various stages of constitutional negotiations are then reviewed: the background, including the 1931 Statute of Westminster; the Victoria constitutional conference, 1971; the negotiations following the Parti Québécois victory in Quebec, 1976; the approval of the Canada Act of 1982 without the consent of Quebec; the Meech Lake Accord, 1987; and the Charlottetown Accord, 1992. Constitutional issues raised by the 1987 and 1992 Accords are discussed. The paper ends with an outline of steps planned in response to the 1995 Quebec referendum.

Identification and simulation of the spatial pattern of juvenile lodgepole pine in the sub-boreal spruce biogeoclimatic zone, Stuart dry warm and Babine moist cold variants

By Gordon D. Nigh. Victoria : Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement on Forest Resource Development: FRDA II, 1996. vi, 28 p. : ill., Bibl. (FRDA report / Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement on Forest Resource Development: FRDA II ; 244 ISSN 0835-0752) On cover: Forestry. ISBN 0-7726-2803-3 MICROLOG 96-05987 (1 fiche)

Describes a study that identified and modelled the spatial pattern of trees in lodgepole pine sites in two biogeoclimatic variants in British Columbia. The K(t) statistic was used to detect the patterns and provide a basis for determining an appropriate spatial process model. Most sites had an aggregated pattern which was modelled effectively by a Poisson cluster process. An equation describing the relationship between the parameters of the Poisson cluster process model was developed. Random patterns occurring in the plots were modelled by a Poisson process and regular patterns by a Markov point process and a lattice-based process. The appendix contains the algorithm for the processes used.

Identification of DNA markers which predict performance traits in beef cattle : final report

By Yves Plante. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1996. 32 p. MICROLOG 96-06127 (1 fiche)

Reports on the development of a bank of bovine microsatellite markers that spans the entire bovine genome at regular intervals spaced every 20-30 centimorgans. Six test sire reference families, part of the Canadian Charolais Association Conception to Consumer program, are then genotyped. Statistical analyses between microsatellite markers and production (growth and carcass) traits are presented which reveal some possible associations of interest to cattle producers.

The impact of casinos on horse racing

Provides an overview of the current state of the North American gaming industry and examines the impact of the introduction of casinos on horse racing in a number of jurisdictions. Also examines attempts by the horse racing industry and legislators to respond to the restructuring which is occurring in the gaming industry as a result of the proliferation of casinos. These efforts include joint race-track/casino operations, installing slot machines at racetracks, marketing, off-track betting, and reduced taxes. Finally, considers the implications of casinos for the future of the Windsor Raceway and the Fort Erie Race Track.

Impact of livestock manure and fertilizer application on nitrate contamination of groundwater : final report

Prepared by M.F. Younis... et al. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, Environmental Research, 1996. xxviii, 282 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7779-5030-3 MICROLOG 96-05960 (4 fiche)

This study examines nitrogen leaching out of the root zone and nitrogen supply to corn from two types of manure (liquid dairy cattle manure and solid beef manure) and from inorganic nitrogen fertilizer. The investigators studied the fate of nitrogen as a function of nitrogen source, application rate, and application time (fall or spring). Corn stover, grain yields, and nitrogen concentrations in soil and water were measured, soil solution concentrations of nitrate and ammonium were monitored weekly during the growing season, and amounts of soil mineral nitrogen, extractable nitrogen, and extractable carbon were monitored at various times by taking soil samples. In addition, detailed studies were conducted of denitrification and of water balance, the latter to characterize the chemical leaching process at the site.

Improved methods of injecting swine manure to agricultural land : final report

Prairie Agricultural Machinery Institute (Canada). Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1996. 63 p. : ill. MICROLOG 96-06122 (1 fiche)

Current methods of applying swine manure slurry to farmland results in odour problems and loss of large quantities of crop nutrient nitrogen. The objective of the project described in this report was to design, develop, and field test a cultivator based, high volume injection system to maximise the nutrient value of swine slurry delivered to the soil while reducing odour during application. The system developed consists of a distribution manifold with a debris cutting system and a delivery boot/soil opener combination. Results are presented for both laboratory and field testing. Recommendations for future development are included.

This paper is being distributed as part of the current review of the Canada Pension Plan, whose sustainability has been the focus of recent discussion. The paper provides an opportunity for the public to assess the challenges facing the Plan, form their own opinion, and make their views known during upcoming consultations. The paper begins with an overview of the role and evolution of the Plan, its benefits, and its administration. Issues facing the plan are discussed, including demographic and economic changes. The next two sections present an approach to strengthening the financing of the Plan and options for reducing Plan costs with regard to administration, retirement pensions, disability benefits, survivor benefits, and partial pensions. Appendices include a summary of the Plan's 15th actuarial report and detailed information on steady-state financing.

Effective injury management in the workplace focuses on prevention and effective management of claims. It is a problem-solving approach with emphasis on the worker, job demands, training, and management support. This booklet outlines the components of injury management and explains the steps of Injury Prevention Modules, which are used in Saskatchewan to provide detailed anatomical and physiological background information to owners, employers, and workers about specific types of injuries and about how and why they occur. The steps include: commitment on the part of management and workers; appointment of a coordinator; analysis of company needs (hazard identification and classification, types of training required); development of policies and standards; development and implementation of workplace-specific training; and evaluation.

Interim report of the Special Environmental Auditor with respect to the draining of Downton reservoir in 1996

By Gregory J. McDade. Vancouver, BC : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, 1996. 69 p.
MICROLOG 96-06444 (1 fiche)

Downton Lake, a reservoir now part of the BC Hydro Seton- Bridge River system, was created by construction of the LaJole Dam. BC Hydro has determined that the dam gates needed changes and upgrades, and wished to perform a preliminary inspection of gate chambers and seals. The utility decided as early as September 1995 that it would be necessary to lower the reservoir below the minimum operating level to perform the inspection. Lake levels were reduced at normal operating rates during April 1996 and a final draining took place by May 1, leaving the reservoir essentially empty. Substantial losses of fish occurred and public reaction was negative. This report presents the interim findings of an investigation into the reservoir draining, examining such issues as: the lack of any efforts by BC Hydro to anticipate and address the environmental impacts of the draining; the utility's internal policies regarding environmental impacts of reservoir operation; and the adequacy of regulatory controls over the environmental aspects of BC Hydro operations.

Public comments about the use of special warrants are reviewed, a summary is presented of special warrant spending authorities used in British Columbia and elsewhere in Canada, and the need for government to amend the statutory authority that provides for special warrant spending is discussed. The second issue is how many people are employed by the government, whether the employee numbers published are in accordance with the Financial Administration Act, and the accuracy of reporting of government employee numbers. The third issue is the need to distinguish between government program and partisan political communications.

The relevant part of the proponent's property is designated as an Escarpment Protection Area by the Niagara Escarpment Plan. The Regional Municipality of Niagara approved the proposal and the Niagara Escarpment Commission appealed. The Commission also refused to grant a development permit, and the proponent appealed that decision. This document presents the findings of the Joint Board regarding the two appeals, focusing on whether the proposed consent and development ought to be governed by the Plan's policies respecting creation of new lots or should be viewed as the restoration of two existing lots of record. This report characterises the variation in life history traits important to biological productivity in two of the key fish species in the Lower Slave River: inconnu and burbot, both piscivorous throughout most of their lives, abundant in the river, and important for both commercial and Aboriginal subsistence harvest. Specifically, the report describes size at age, the seasonal pattern of sexual maturity development with time, age at maturity, size and age-specific fecundity, and the population age structure of those two species.

Ce document renferme les révisions subséquentes apportées aux objectifs nationaux de qualité de l'air ambiant ainsi que des recommandations concernant des sous-indices supplémentaires. Dans le document, nous voulons présenter des informations sur les effets néfastes des cinq polluants atmosphériques les plus courants, à savoir l'anhydride sulfureux, le monoxyde de carbone, le dioxyde d'azote, l'ozone et les particules en suspension. Il est possible d'établir d'autres sous-indices, comme celui du soufre réduit total et de les ajouter à l'IQUA.

Lillooet Timber Supply Area : rationale for allowable annual cut (AAC) determination, effective August 1, 1996

By Larry Pedersen. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, 1996. 60 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-06332 (1 fiche)

The Lillooet Timber Supply Area (TSA) covers about 1.12 million hectares in south-western British Columbia, of which about 23% is considered to be available for timber harvesting. After a brief description of the TSA, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the TSA and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the land base contributing to the timber harvest, existing forest inventory, expected rate of growth, regeneration delay, silvicultural systems, decay and waste, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, economic and social objectives, and timber processing facilities. The appendix contains relevant sections from the British Columbia Forest Act and a summary of public input to the TSA Timber Supply Review.

This guide offers tested and practical advice on how local governments can implement the United Nations Agenda 21 action plan for sustainable development and the related United Nations Habitat Agenda. It has been prepared to assist local governments and their local partners to learn and undertake the task of sustainable development planning, and provides a theoretical, step-by-step sequence in order to clarify key planning issues. Case studies drawn from over five years of experience are used to illustrate the concepts presented. Sections of the guide cover the concept of sustainable development and the elements of sustainable development planning; determining the scope of planning, creating stakeholder groups, and developing partnerships; community-based issue analysis; action planning, including the setting of targets, selection of implementation strategies and programs, and promotion of implementation partnerships; creating effective implementation structures and planning linkages, and internal auditing/monitoring; and plan evaluation and feedback. ### Local manufactured home park committee handbook

Victoria : Ministry of Housing, Recreation & Consumer Services, Residential Tenancy Branch, 1996. 57 p.

In British Columbia, most owners of manufactured homes are renters as well, because they lease the pads where their homes are located. This handbook is a guide for participants in Local Park Committees, which provide a forum for tenants and landlords to present their points of view and discuss and resolve landlord/tenant issues at manufactured home parks. The main function of the Committees is to plan and resolve issues before they become disputes. The handbook includes information on establishing a committee, dispute resolution using principled communication, arriving at solutions via brainstorming, the role of a dispute resolution committee, tenancy agreements, and park rules. The handbook ends with questions and answers regarding the issues covered. The appendix contains relevant sections of the Residential Tenancy Act Regulation.

In this paper, we attempt to analyze the evolution of regional disparities in income/output per capita in Canada over a long time span in light of past studies on convergence. This exercise serves two purposes. First, we try to explain the apparent contradiction between the convergence results arising from recent work and the pessimistic view that prevailed in the early 1980s. Second, the evolution of regional disparity patterns can provide a hint about the appropriate theoretical framework for understanding regional growth trends in Canada. CA CO ND SA SS

Marble Mountain is located about 10 kilometres east of Corner Brook, Newfoundland. The mountain has a ski facility operated on a mainly volunteer basis by a local ski club, and the facility's finances and management have been problematic at best. The facility has been developed only gradually and sporadically, and has no support facilities to attract a wider range of winter or summer tourists. In view of its potential for tourism development, a feasibility study has been undertaken to investigate the potential for developing Marble Mountain as a four-season resort facility. This report presents the study findings. It begins with background information on Marble Mountain and the ski facility, a review of regional tourism and accommodations, and a discussion of various options for developing the site. The next two chapters contain the major market analysis and the basic physical development proposal for a resort facility. Chapter six contains the financial analysis, assessing how such a resort might perform relative to industry standards and the kind of financing required. The report concludes with recommendations for both the development of the site and for additional research and analysis needed to sustain the development.

Au Canada, on reconnaît que les indicateurs constituent un mécanisme clé permettant d'encourager et de mesurer les progrès accomplis à l'égard du développement durable es villes. La Société canadienne d'hypothèques et de logement et Environnement Canada ont invité des experts provenant des universités, des municipalités ainsi que des gouvernements fédéral et provinciaux à participer à "Mesure de la durabilité urbaine : atelier sur les indicateurs au Canada". Cet atelier leur a fourni l'occasion de discuter des réussites et des échecs des méthodes et des cadres actuels et de commencer à modéliser l'avenir des indicateurs de durabilité urbaine au Canada.

Metalaxyl contamination of ground water and tile drainage water in Atlantic Canada

Moncton, NB : Environment Canada, Environmental Conservation Branch, Atlantic Region, Ecosystem Science Division, 1996. vi, 30 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-662-24619-5 CCG-P no. En21-151/1996E

Metalaxyl (methyl-N-(2,6-dimethylphenyl)-N-(2-methoxyacetyl)alaninate) is a systemic fungicide registered in Canada for use on a variety of crops including potatoes and berries. This study investigated the leaching and ground water contamination potential of metalaxyl using three approaches: by sampling domestic wells situated on or near potato farms where the fungicide was used; by sampling piezometer wells, located within potato fields having a metalaxyl use history, throughout the annual ground water cycle; and by sampling surface and subsurface drainage water from a tiled commercial potato field during precipitation events. The study sites were located in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Immunoassay tests were used to determine which water samples contained metalaxyl before submitting them to the more costly gas chromatographic/mass spectrometry analysis method. Results are reported in micrograms of metalaxyl per litre.

In sous vide processing, food products are prepared from raw ingredients, pre-cooked, packaged, sealed under vacuum, and cooked/pasteurised at pre-established temperature/time conditions and cooled immediately to 4 degrees C. The products are then stored or distributed under refrigeration. This study addresses the paucity of information about the physical, chemical, and microbiological changes in sous vide potato products throughout their shelf-life storage period. It presents results from shelf-life studies done on a minimally processed sous vide potato product subjected to two heat processing methods and subsequently stored at refrigeration and at mild temperature abuse storage conditions. Results presented include proximate analyses, degree of package swelling and product browning, changes in pH and total acidity, and bacterial counts.

Describes results of an investigation into the migration and movement of two key fish species harvested in the Slave River and Great Slave Lake: inconnu and burbot. Investigators sampled these fish on a regular basis using gill nets from June to November 1994 and determined movement patterns over time and space by radio tagging of 24 inconnu and 16 burbot in fall 1994. Tracking was carried out through fall 1994 to July 1995. Findings are compared to those of previous observations from commercial fishing records. The results may have implications for transfer of contaminants over the lower Slave River and Great Slave Lake area.

Parry Sound district covers 4,336 square miles, bounded on the west by Georgian Bay and on the north by Lake Nipissing and the French River. The district has been prospected since the 1890s and has seen certain periods of mining activity. This report describes the district's topography and drainage, natural resources, general geology (Precambrian sediments and intrusives, Pleistocene glacial deposits), structural geology (folding, shearing, faulting, fracturing), and mineral occurrences. The latter are arranged alphabetically by commodity name and location of occurrence. The commodities include copper, gold, iron, titanium, clay, diatomite, feldspar, graphite, limestone, mica, and stone. An index to occurrences by township is included.

The area described in this report comprises Haliburton County, parts of Ontario, Peterborough, and Victoria counties, and parts of Muskoka, Nipissing, and Parry Sound districts. Numerous mineral occurrences have been found in the area since the 1890s but few have seen commercial production. The report describes the area's topography and drainage, natural resources, settlement history, general geology (mostly Precambrian volcanics, sediments, and intrusives), and mineral occurrences. The latter are presented in alphabetical order by mineral name, then alphabetically by counties and townships. Where available, information is included on local geology, mineralogy, ore assays, and mine production. The mineral commodities include clay, corundum, diatomite, feldspar, graphite, iron, lead, limestone, mica, molybdenum, nepheline, peat, and stone. Includes index to occurrences by township.

The continuous dynamic network loading problem (CDNLP) consists of determining, on a congested network, time-dependent arc volumes, together with arc and path travel times, given the time-varying path flow departure rates over a finite time horizon. This problem constitutes an intrinsic part of the dynamic traffic assignment problem. This paper presents a formulation of the CDNLP where travel delays may be non-linear functions of arc traffic volumes. It examines whether there is a unique solution under a boundedness condition and proposes a finite-step algorithm for the solution. Some computational results are reported for a discretised version of the algorithm.

Clay soils on glaciolacustrine plains in the Canadian prairies have physical and chemical properties very different from associated regional soils developed in lighter-textured sediments. It is generally considered that these soils require recognition at a higher level than that at which they are presently recognised in the Canadian System of Soil Classification (CSCS) because of their unique characteristics. Similarities between these soils and vertisols of tropical and subtropical regions led eventually to a decision to establish a new soil order, vertisol, within the CSCS. This report summarises the work carried out by the Soil Classification Working Group in Canada, outlines the general characteristics of vertisol soils (including diagnostic horizons), indicates their geographic distribution, explains the reasons for establishing a new order within the CSCS, and reviews some of the problems in the use and management of vertisol soils. The appendix includes descriptions and analyses of vertisol soils at selected Canadian sites.

Due to the threat to remaining old red pine (Pinus resinosa) and white pine (Pinus strobus) forests in Ontario, the Old Growth Policy Advisory Committee emphasised the need to move forward immediately with protecting sites having representation values. The Ministry of Natural Resources reviewed the committee recommendations and prepared an action plan. By January 1994, the Northwest Region Old Growth Committee completed mapping and criteria setting to identify deferral candidates within the range of red and white pine in the Northwest Region of the province. This report outlines the inventory and analysis that was carried out, the rationale behind the development of criteria to identify old growth stands, and the steps leading up to the identification of candidate areas for protection. The appendix includes a list of all old growth red and white pine stands identified which meet the criteria given in the report.

Chondrostereum purpureum is a common stem-invading fungus of trees and shrubs. The fungus has attracted interest as a bioherbicide, but a better understanding of its biology is required. This study was undertaken to determine the range of virulence of isolates of C. purpureum from a given region on major hardwood species in British Columbia. The investigators inoculated wounds of stems of standing red alder (Alnus rubra) and bigleaf maple (Acer macrophyllum) saplings with 11 isolates of the fungus and measured the resulting stem cankers as an index of virulence. They also inoculated eight hardwood and shrub species with two isolates to demonstrate the range of susceptibility of species to the fungus, as well as the intraspecific variation. BC CA FO ND PR SC

CC2-11454E MICROLOG 96-06240 (1 fiche)

Summarises the post-irradiation examination results of three Candu nuclear fuel bundles which were successfully irradiated to outer-element burnups of 570-900 megawatts per kilogram of uranium. These bundles were of 37-element Bruce NGS-A first-charge design that contained gas plenums in the outer elements. The post-irradiation examination was performed to better understand the limits of extended-burnup performance. Results are compared with those previously reported for Bruce NGS-A fuel irradiated to extended burnups. Correlation between parameters such as fission gas release and operating history is discussed. ### Performance of Saskatchewan soils for construction of earthen hog manure storages : final report

By T.A. Forstad and C.P. Maule. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1996. 158 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 96-06155 (2 fiche)

Large-scale hog production facilities in the Prairie Provinces prefer to use earthen manure storages with typical storage volumes of 10 to 35 thousand cubic metres. These storages are constructed using conventional earthmoving equipment and in-situ soil materials, and are a cost-effective and environmentally feasible way of holding the manure until field application as long as proper design consideration is given to control of seepage. This report outlines research undertaken to evaluate the suitability of Saskatchewan soils for construction of such storages and to evaluate the risk associated with potential seepage. Field investigations were conducted on existing hog manure storages located in various soil types and involved installation of groundwater monitoring wells and analyses of soil and water for such parameters as nitrate. Laboratory investigations involved hydraulic conductivity tests using columns of seven different soils of varying clay, silt, and sand contents. AG MS NR PR SC

Describes a study undertaken to determine the harvesting efficiency of the New England hydraulic dredge for gathering Stimpson's surf clams and to assess the immediate impact of that fishing gear on the mollusc populations. The first part of the study took place aboard a commercial clamming boat in the Gulf of Saint Lawrence and the second part was conducted aboard a research vessel. Sampling of each station was carried out with a hydraulic dredge and the assistance of a professional dive team. Effects of dredging on the bottom environment (sediment suspension) are also noted. ### Petroleum possibilities of the James Bay lowland area : drilling in the James Bay lowland

By N.W. Martison...et al. Toronto : Dept. of Mines, 1953. vii, 163 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. Published as vol. LXI, part VI, of the Ontario Dept. of Mines annual report, 1952. Fold. maps not filmed. MICROLOG 96-06281 (2 fiche)

Interest in the possible occurrence of petroleum and natural gas in the James Bay lowland arises from the presence there of Palaeozoic sedimentary formations resembling those in south-western Ontario. The first part of this report reviews earlier geologic surveys conducted in the lowland and reports results of field work and drill core studies 1946-51. It describes the area's topography, climate, stratigraphy and palaeontology (Ordovician to Lower Cretaceous, plus Pleistocene and recent glacial deposits), structural geology, and evidence of petroleum. Lists of fossils and correlations are included. The appendices include a list of fossil locations and drill logs. The second part details the drilling programs carried out in the lowland by the Ontario Dept. of Mines, including detailed logs, as well as drilling carried out by some other organisations. Methyl chloroform (also known as 1,1,1-trichloroethane) is used in metal cleaning, as a solvent, and in cleaners, pesticides, and some chemical processing applications. It damages the ozone layer and its production and import are being phased out according to the 1987 Montreal Protocol. This booklet explains the reason for the phase-out, reviews Canadian and provincial regulations governing the phase-out, and provides information to ensure that companies using this chemical have early notification of the phase-out and can adjust without unnecessary costs. It includes a list of chemical and trade names of substances containing methyl chloroform; information on methods for reducing chlorinated solvent use and on alternative chemicals that may be used; and sources of further information; and case studies of successful phase-outs, based on United States experience.

Moss has been used successfully to map zones of heavy metal contamination around point sources of air pollution, due to the absorption capacity of moss and its ability to sorb and retain airborne trace metals from wet and dry deposition. Small quantities of moss sewn into packets of nylon mesh are known as moss bags, which have been employed by Ontario's Phytotoxicology Section to study zones of atmospheric contamination around a range of industrial sources. This report presents results of a moss bag survey involving three exposure periods (October, November, and December 1994) at sites in the western part of Wallaceburg, Ontario, where a number of die casters and various metal forming and stamping plants are located. Results presented include chemical analyses for 18 inorganic elements in moss and a series of contour maps showing inorganic element values found in moss collected in the vicinity of the plants.

Presents the results of an investigation that had the main objective of gaining an understanding of post-yield buckling of primary structure. A secondary objective was to check the proposed Canadian Arctic Shipping Pollution Prevention Regulations with regards to the adequacy of the design of primary structure. The bulk of the work involved a numerical investigation into the post-yield buckling response of a ship structure to an ice load, using the icebreaker MV Arctic as the candidate ship for modelling. The post-yield buckling response was determined by numerical analyses of both the original ship structure and the MV Arctic structure redesigned in accordance with the Regulations. The analyses consisted of a linear finite element analysis of a global model of the MV Arctic using the MAESTRO program and a series of non-linear finite element analyses of models of local structure of the midbody and bow, using the ADINA program. The global model included all the principal structural members which contribute to hull structural stiffness. The applied loads consisted of three components: a still water bending moment, a hydrostatic pressure load, and an ice load.

Le pourridié-agaric est une maladie des racines des plantes causée par des champignons du genre "Armillaria". La majorité des espèces d'arbres que l'on retrouve dans le monde, autant dans les régions tempérées que tropicales, peuvent être atteintes par cette maladie. Cependant, c'est dans les plantations que les dégâts sont les plus notables et probablement les plus importants. Ce pourridié peut se contrôler, mais difficilement. Ce document se penche sur le pourridié-agaric et examine les points suivants : hôtes et importance de la maladie; agents pathogènes; symptômes et signes de la maladie; infection et développement de la maladie; méthodes de lutte; mesures préventives; mesures d'accommodement; et, bibliographie complémentaire.

A Preliminary historical land use inventory for the Lake Ontario greenway : a tool for identifying potentially contaminated lands

Historical land use inventories (HLUIs) are important tools for municipalities, investors, and others involved in the restoration and redevelopment of industrial properties. HLUIs flag properties where there could be soil and groundwater concerns; these areas can then be assessed in detail as part of redevelopment projects. This document outlines the step-by-step procedure for creation of a HLUI, from the planning process to the maintenance of the inventory; describes the purpose and advantages of geographic information systems (GIS) as the presentation format for the HLUI; presents an overview of information sources used for a HLUI of the Lake Ontario Greenway area; and provides an example of the use of GIS for the Greenway HLUI, along with suggestions on how municipalities can use that HLUI to create their own, more detailed HLUIs. Appendices list the historical databases used in the Greenway inventory.

Preliminary modelling study of geochemical interactions between a used-fuel disposal vault and the surrounding geosphere

In the environmental impact statement and related documents that describe the Canadian nuclear fuel waste disposal concept, it is assumed that a disposal vault would have no significant geochemical impact on the geosphere. This study evaluates that assumption and estimates the general magnitude and significance of vault-induced geochemical changes over an expected range of temperatures. The results of the preliminary modelling are used broadly to evaluate the implications of these changes for the migration of radionuclides through the geosphere. The PHREEQE geochemical modelling program was used to calculate the changes in mineral solubilities that would result from the transfer of aqueous species from the vault to the geosphere or that would result from groundwater-granite interactions enhanced by vault-derived elevated temperatures. Twelve representative vault water compositions were used in the modelling.

La pollution menace la population canadienne. Elle menace notre santé, notre environnement et notre économie. Il est temps de nous débarrasser de cette menace. Il est temps que nous cessions de penser à assainir; il est temps que nous nous préoccupions de prévenir la pollution. Ce document se penche sur une meilleure approche en protection environnementale: prévenir la pollution plutôt que la contrôler. Il explique comment nous pouvons nous débarrasser des causes de pollution plutôt que de n'en traiter que les symptômes, comment moderniser les équipements, arrêter de se servir de produits toxiques et prendre les mesures nécessaires pour éviter les risques liés à l'environnement.

This workbook is intended for small professional service firms, especially those that are managed by owners and are too small to have separate quality assurance or marketing departments. The workbook translates the wording of ISO 9000 standards into the realities of a professional service firm's daily operations to provide a tool for streamlining the ISO 9000 registration process. The workbook's questions, checklists, and planning guides focus on the types of internal decisions and discussions needed to have in place an acceptable quality assurance system and ensure that the ISO 9000 registration process provides real value-added for the firm. Sections of the workbook cover the nature of ISO 9000, deciding whether to apply for registration, planning the registration approach, designing the quality system, managing documentation, getting registered, and after registration. Appendices include directories of ISO 9000 resources, registrars, and international accreditation bodies.

This guide is intended for those geomatics companies that want to improve the quality of their operations and prepare themselves for the dedicated and focused effort that ISO 9000 requires. Sections of the guide explain what ISO 9000 is, how ISO 9000 fits into the context of a company's requirements, what must be done to implement ISO 9000, and what are the 20 elements of the ISO 9001 standard (the most complex and comprehensive of the ISO 9000 series). Case studies are used to illustrate geomatics companies actually using ISO 9000 quality practices.

R-D et croissance de la productivité dans le secteur manufacturier et l'industrie du matériel de communications au Canada

Par Jeffrey I. Bernstein. Ottawa : Industrie Canada, 1996. iv, 52. 48 p. : Bibl. (Document de travail / Canada. Industrie Canada ; no 10) Bilingue (R&D and productivity...).
MICROLOG 96-06473 (2 fiche)

La productivité et les facteurs de production sont les deux sources de croissance de la production dans une économie. La croissance de la productivité est également attribuable au progrès technologique, aux économies d'échelle et aux autres sources de gains d'efficacité qui font sentir leurs effets avec le temps. Dans ce document, nous abordons trois grandes questions. La première a trait à l'estimation des effets des retombées de la R-D de l'industrie du matériel de communications sur la structure de production ou l'intensité des facteurs dans le secteur de la fabrication au Canada. La deuxième question est liée à la contribution des retombées de la R-D à la croissance de la productivité. La troisième question traite des effets des retombées de la R-D du point de vue de l'utilisateur ou du bénéficiaire de ces retombées.

Radioactive mineral occurrences in the Bancroft area

By J. Satterly. Toronto : Dept. of Mines, 1957. vi, 181 p. : Ill., Maps, Bibl. Published as vol. LXV, part 8, of the Ontario Dept. of Mines annual report, 1956. Fold. maps not filmed.
MICROLOG 96-06260 (2 fiche)

Summarises three years of field work conducted in the Bancroft area investigating occurrences of radioactive minerals, and also includes accounts of properties in the area for which drill logs and survey reports have been filed. Begins with a history of exploration and development of radioactive mineral deposits in the area, a review of the area's general geology (Grenville metasediments, plutonic rocks), and general descriptions of the types of radioactive mineral deposits found in the area (deposits in granitic and syenitic bodies, metasomatic deposits in limy rocks, hydrothermal deposits). Also describes the mineralogy of radioactive minerals found in the area and the Geiger counter technique used in the investigation. The bulk of the report consists of descriptions of radioactive mineral properties and mine workings, containing (where available) information on exploration history, general and economic geology, and production.

La Loi sur l'efficacité énergétique habilite le gouvernement à adopter et à appliquer des règlements sur l'efficacité énergétique et les énergies de remplacement (EEER). Le chapitre premier replace dans leur contexte et dans leur cadre politique les initiatives de programme d'EEER décrivant l'importance que revêt l'énergie pour les Canadiens, la démarche fédérale à l'égard de l'efficacité énergétique et des énergies de remplacement, et la stratégie adoptée par RNCAN pour encourager les Canadiens à investir dans l'accroissement de l'efficacité énergétique et des énergies de remplacement. Le chapitre deux décrit les pouvoirs dévolus par la loi en matière d'élaboration de règlements, le premier règlement en matière d'efficacité énergétique et d'étiquetage, le processus de consultation, les dispositions visant le respect des règlements et le travail en cours afin d'élargir la portée du règlement actuel. Les chapitres trois à neuf décrivent les programmes de RNCAN en matière d'efficacité énergétique et d'énergies de remplacement: les initiatives générales, bâtiments, équipement, industrie, transports, et énergies de remplacement: les carburants de remplacement et l'énergie renouvelable.

Productivity and the factors of production are the two sources of output growth in an economy. Productivity growth generally arises from technological improvements, scale economies and other sources of efficiency gains over time. This paper addresses three major issues. The first one has to do with estimating the effects of R&D spillovers from the communications equipment industry on the structure of production or factor intensities of the Canadian manufacturing sector. The second issue relates to the contribution of R&D spillovers to productivity growth. The third issue pertains to an estimation of the private and social rates of return to R&D capital.

Report of the Task Force on Early Intervention

Task Force on Early Intervention (Sask.). Regina : Workers' Compensation Board, 1995. 119 p. : ill., Bibl. MICROLOG 96-05976 (2 fiche)

A review committee examining areas of concern related to injured workers in Saskatchewan identified a series of problems in the operation of the provincial Injured Workers Program. The most serious one was the lengthy waiting time for Program admission, resulting in workers becoming chronically disabled. It became clear that some change to the system of referral and review of what was happening to the injured worker upon entering the field of health care was required to reduce the waiting time. A proposed Early Intervention Program will provide a system of assessment, treatment, and review for returning the injured worker to both a productive life style and employment. This report examines the obstacles to early intervention and makes recommendations on ways to overcome or minimise these obstacles. It also describes the proposed early intervention system and its components, operators, and mechanisms, and presents a strategy for the phased implementation of Early Intervention Program objectives. Appendices include details of Program components (case management, assessment management, rehabilitation management) and a glossary.

Notre recherche a porté sur la représentation des femmes et des hommes dans la télédiffusion des Jeux olympiques d'hiver de 1994 à Lillehammer. Nous nous sommes penchés surtout sur la couverture du réseau CTV, mais aussi sur la publicité et sur les reportages diffusés lors des bulletins d'informations et des actualités sportives aux stations CBLT et CFTO. Legumes can fix atmospheric nitrogen and their residues have a higher nitrogen content than non-legumes. It is often assumed that the beneficial effect of legumes to the next crop is due to this additional nitrogen. This report describes experiments conducted to assess the nitrogen and non-nitrogen related factors responsible for enhanced seed yields of cereals sown on pulse crop stubble. Pea-wheat, lentil-wheat, and wheat-wheat rotations were established at a number of Saskatchewan sites, and yields of spring wheat grown on wheat stubble were compared to yields of wheat grown on legume stubble. The effects on yield differences due to legume residue contribution of nitrogen, reduction in leaf diseases, growing season soil nitrogen availability, landscape position of crop, and reduction in weed infestation are noted.

Stands of dry-belt, uneven-aged interior Douglas-fir form an important portion of the harvest in interior British Columbia. Individual tree growth rates are often slow in these stands due to high levels of competition. Removal of some of the smaller trees in the dense patches (spacing) is a possible method for increasing growth rate, with the incidental benefits for deer habitat. This report describes a spacing study carried out in the Alex Fraser Research Forest and assesses the initial effects of three spacing treatments (standard uniform spacing and two clumped spacings with different minimum distances between clumps) on residual stand structures. Results presented include the tree distribution characteristics of the plot before and after the treatments.

Retention of a significant number of qualified personnel has been identified as among the most important present and future concerns of police organisations. This report presents results of a study of employee turnover in British Columbia's twelve municipal police agencies. Study methodology included a literature review, consultations with police agencies and researchers, a survey of the twelve police departments, and in-depth interviews with randomly selected members of those departments. The first chapter of the report reviews the reasons for leaving the police force as revealed in interviews with male and female officers. Chapter two outlines the views of male and female officers with respect to their department's human resource management practices and their perceived significance to job satisfaction and turnover. The third chapter examines areas which have been linked with turnover of women in organisations. The final chapter outlines a retention plan for police departments. Appendices include data on numbers of female officers in British Columbia municipal departments and a summary of report recommendations.

An essential part of the federal budget is the fiscal forecast. That forecast is strongly influenced by the expected future path of the economy, which is described by the Dept. of Finance's economic forecast released within the budget. Sizeable differences between some of the Dept.'s projections and actual outcomes in recent years has raised concern over the credibility of the forecasts and whether they reflect a balanced view of future performance. Accordingly, the Minister of Finance commissioned this review of the Dept.'s forecasting performance over the past decade and of its current forecasting methods. The review presents a careful evaluation of the Dept.'s economic and fiscal forecast record (both year-ahead and medium-term) over 1982/83 to 1992/93; a measurement of the relative performance of the Dept. compared to private sector forecasters, other governments, and international agencies; and an assessment of the data, methodologies, and processes used by the Dept. to prepare its economic and fiscal forecasts. Reasons for forecast inaccuracy are evaluated and discussed, and recommendations for improvement are made.

Une mortalité de maquereau bleu nous a incités à déterminer si les toxines IPM (intoxication paralysante par les mollusques) pouvaient en être responsables. Les toxines IPM sont des toxines naturelles produites par des algues microscopiques appelées phytoplancton. Dans ce document, nous avons réalisé trois échantillonnages distincts. Le premier fut un échantillonnage de maquereaux morts et vivants à la fin de mai et au début de juin 1993 au site où s'est produite la mortalité. Nous avons conduit le deuxième échantillonnage entre juin et octobre 1993 pour examiner la variabilité saisonnière des niveaux de toxines et aussi pour augmenter la taille de l'échantillon de maquereaux vivants. Le troisième échantillonnage fut réalisé du 30 mai au 3 juin 1994.

The purpose of this paper is to discuss the extent to which environmental standards have become part of the national and international contract allocation decisions of European and North American multinational corporations. The paper treats the environmental dimension to decision making as a potentially new and under-researched policy variable in corporate planning, with the goal of evaluating the importance of environmental considerations in the cost-benefit appraisals of companies that source parts, components, and/or raw materials from both domestic and foreign locations. Data for the study come from extensive telephone interviews with corporate executives from 12 multinationals that were pre-identified as having a formal interest in environmental matters.

A mortality of Atlantic Mackerel reported in Cape Breton (N.S.) in May 1993 prompted us to determine if paralytic shellfish poisoning toxins could be identified as a potential cause of the kill. PSP toxins are natural toxins originating from microscopic algae called phytoplankton. We conducted three separate sampling. The first was a sampling of dead and live mackerel in late May and early June 1993 at the site of the kill. This allowed us to collect seven dead mackerel stranded on the beaches of St. Lawrence Bay in Cabot Strait. We carried out the second sampling between June and October 1993 to examine the seasonal variability in toxin levels and also to increase the sample size for live mackerel. The third sampling was conducted from May 30 to June 3, 1994.

This paper first discusses some of the major components of sequential location models, in the context of competitive location models. Such models have application in such areas as the location of physical facilities (fast food restaurants, gas stations), positioning of competing brands in the marketplace, and positioning of electoral candidates within an issue space to maximise votes. The paper then reviews competitive location models based on the space in which they are located (on a line, in d-dimensional space, and in networks). The final section discusses some locational games in which players repeatedly reoptimise the locations of their facilities. Finally, issues requiring further research are identified.

Il expose donc en détail les risques que le terrorisme représente pour le Canada et les Canadiens, et décrit la façon dont le gouvernement, en particulier le SCRS, affronte ces risques et s'y oppose.

A Shifted barrier based primal path following algorithm for the monotone variational inequality problem

By Jia Hao Wu, Michael Florian and Jose M. Rubio-Ardanaz. Montréal: Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1996. 13 p.: Ill., Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports; no. 96-23)
MICROLOG 96-05984 (1 fiche)

This paper develops a shifted barrier primal path-following algorithm for the monotone variational inequality problem. This new algorithm overcomes some inherent drawbacks over some other path-following algorithms with classic barrier functions. The basic features of this new algorithm are: there is a need to work only in a primal variable space, the feasible region of each subproblem contains and converges to the original feasible region, and the initial point is not required to be strictly positive but only feasible. A proof is offered of the global convergence of the algorithm under the assumptions of the monotonicity and differentiability of the mapping involved. Some numerical results are reported and compared with the modified primal path-following algorithm of Wu (1995).

MICROLOG 96-05903 (2 fiche)

Presents an ecosystem approach to the management of the north shore of Lake Ontario from Burlington Beach to the Trent River. Begins with a description of the fundamental physical and biological processes at work on the north shore, with discussion of the links and interdependence among these processes. This descriptive model is then applied to develop management strategies for the nine shoreline units that comprise the north shore. The next chapter provides an overview of the agencies responsible for shore management issues, and the relevant legislation. The subsequent two chapters discuss data collection and management for the north shore, shoreline alterations such as erosion protection works, dredging, and lakefilling. A summary of the main recommendations is included.

A Simple analysis of potential radiological exposure from geological disposal of Canada's nuclear fuel waste

An environmental impact statement describing a proposal for geological disposal of Canada's nuclear fuel waste presents a detailed analysis of potential radiation exposure of an individual of a critical group of people in a hypothetical case. This analysis is complex, involves many assumptions, and requires much time, expertise, and effort to review. This report provides a simpler analysis of potential exposure in the hope that the inherent safety of the proposed disposal method will be more readily evident from the analysis. A key to the simplification is the elimination from the analysis of the complex transport processes through disposal vault sealing materials and the geosphere. Also eliminated is the relatively complex function describing the failure of the thin-walled titanium nuclear waste containers. The simplified analysis conceptually replaces those containers with thicker-walled copper containers and retains the assumption that the three most important mobile radionuclides can escape through an undetected manufacturing defect in the container wall, and that the radionuclide flux is diluted by well water being used by people. Results are presented for two cases, depending on whether the well water is used for irrigation, estimating the radiological dose rates for iodine-129, chlorine-36, and carbon-14.

MICROLOG 96-06318 (1 fiche)

The objective of this report is to estimate the size, scope, and potential market opportunities for Canadian businesses in the South African computer software and related services market. It begins with an introduction to the new South Africa, its socio-economic situation, demographics, and potential as an emerging market. The report then reviews the country's computer software industry, including prominent companies, market trends, subsectors, revenues by hardware category, and specific growth areas. A section on exploiting market opportunities offers a profile of software customers and distribution channels. The subsequent sections profile South Africa as a trading partner, giving trade statistics and information on market openness and barriers to trade, and assess South Africa as a place to do business, with information on such matters as banking, infrastructure, human resources, legal system, and patents/copyrights. The appendix includes directories of useful Canadian and South African contacts.

Describes an efficient solution procedure, based on the tabu search heuristic, to determine near-optimal solutions to the vehicle routing and dispatching problem in two different settings: real-time routing where all customer locations are known beforehand but at short notice, and real-time dispatching where requests are received and must be executed in an ongoing fashion. To provide quick response time, the solution procedure is implemented on a coarse-grain parallel computing environment. Computational results of the parallel implementation of the solution algorithm are presented.

This needs assessment was carried out to provide a benchmark for the specialized livestock industry in Saskatchewan and to determine, in the opinion of the producers and stakeholders, future directions for growth and development. The first section reports and analyzes the responses from a questionnaire sent to specialized livestock producers and includes information on producer backgrounds, needs in the area of production practices, financial needs and concerns, and marketing and processing needs. The livestock species produced include bison, elk, ostrich, llama, pheasant, goat, boar, rabbit, deer, and bighorn sheep. The second section analyzes the responses of stakeholders in the specialized livestock industry (such as meat processors, financial institutions, universities, government) to the same survey questionnaire. The third section reports on group interviews held with a cross-section of representatives from the specialized livestock associations and stakeholders regarding such matters as research and development needs, marketing, and finance. The final section summarizes overall findings and makes recommendations for future industry growth and development. The appendix contains a copy of the survey questionnaire.

Cette publication présente les caractéristiques de la demande touristique des Québécois en 1992 concernant leurs voyages au Québec (touristes ou visiteurs ayant séjourné une nuit ou plus au Québec). On ne considère pas les excursionnistes dans cette étude. Le 1er chapitre porte sur les comportements de voyage et sur les caractéristiques socio-économiques des touristes québécois ayant voyagé au Québec (voyages intraprovinciaux, voyages interprovinciaux par destination ou origine). Le 2e fournit une information détaillée à l'intérieur de profils concernant des segments de clientèle particulières (touriste d'agrément, d'affaires et de congrès, touriste venu par avion ou par automobile, touristes voyageant seul ou avec des enfants, etc.). Finalement on présente des statistiques selon 3 indicateurs : voyages-personne, nuitées, et dépenses.

The commercial harvesting of fish from Lake Huron is controlled through area specific allocations and licensee specific quotas which are subject to annual review and revision. This document traces annual harvests for the decade and relates those harvests to the allocations for those years that quota-control has been in place; traces the relative abundance of the primary commercial species through data derived from commercial fishing reports; describes the character of the harvest and of the populations through age and size data taken from on-board sampling of representative commercial catches; and presents a tracking of year-to-year changes in reproduction through independent fishing together with comments on the likely impact of the recruiting year classes. Forecasts of changes in the supply of commercial fish are made based on the composite picture developed.

A previous study has determined that there is a potential to manufacture particle board from straw residues in Saskatchewan. The present report follows a recommendation from that study regarding a further level of product testing. It presents an evaluation of particle board manufacturing equipment suitable for a small-scale plant, comparing characteristics and costs of a British and a Swedish manufacturing system. It then describes the manufacture of prototype straw particle board panels and consumer focus testing of impressions regarding furniture made from the panels. Consumer reactions both before and after being informed of the straw content of the panels are noted. The report ends with results of laboratory tests of panel mechanical and physical properties.

This discussion paper is part of a public consultation to determine how the people of Saskatchewan can best work together to structure the province's education system for the future, particularly in rural and northern areas. It reviews the challenges facing education in the province, lessons learned from previous reviews of the structure of education in Saskatchewan, changes occurring in other provinces, and objectives and principles for change. It then presents four options for structural change: maintaining the status quo; school division restructuring; a regional partnership approach; and establishing regional learning authorities.

Reports new data and analyses for a project studying atmospheric oxidants and focusing on 1993 data collected at Hastings, Ontario. Questions considered in interpreting the Hastings data sets included: how the ozone concentration is related to the age of the air mass; the extent of local ozone production; the use of carbonyl compound measurements to investigate the role of precursor hydrocarbons; the use of organic nitrate measurements to identify organic radicals and assess their importance in ozone production; hydrogen peroxide production; the impact of atmospheric aerosol on radical chemistry; and indicators of ozone-nitrogen oxide-hydrocarbon sensitivity. A second activity of the project was a small experimental effort to improve knowledge of urban concentrations for initialization of a one-dimensional photochemical model.

The purpose of this guide is to present a process for planning and implementing programs that will empower young Black women to address the challenges they face in school and in their daily lives. The guide focuses on two types of programs. The first is an after-school encouragement program, which provides a forum for young Black women to discuss what is on their minds, express their opinions on critical social issues, and gain skills in confronting racism and sexism. Succeeding Young Sisters, a successful after-school encouragement program offered in Ontario, is used as a model. The second type of program is a mentoring program, which provides young Black women with mentors from the Black community who contribute their personal and professional experience to the self-development of Black youth. Profiles are included of nine model mentoring programs for young Black women. The guide also contains information on other types of programs currently offered which may meet the needs of young Black women, such as role modelling programs, young women's programs, educational support programs, and employment programs.

The Sunshine Coast Timber Supply Area (TSA), located along the south-west coast of British Columbia, covers about 1.12 million hectares, of which under 20% is considered to be available for timber harvesting. After a brief description of the TSA, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the area and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the land base contributing to the timber harvest, existing forest composition, expected rate of growth, regeneration delay, silvicultural systems, decay and waste, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, community dependence on the forest industry, economic and social objectives, and non-recoverable losses. The appendix contains relevant sections from the British Columbia Forest Act and a summary of public input to the TSA timber supply review.

Describes a study in which salt water acclimated, coded-wire tagged, and adipose-clipped pink salmon fry were exposed to 25-54 or 178-349 micrograms/litre of the water soluble fraction (WSF) of North Slope crude oil. About 30,000 fry in each control, low-dose, and high-dose treatment group were exposed for ten days and then released to Discovery Passage, British Columbia, to complete their two-year life cycle in the Pacific Ocean. The experiment was replicated in three consecutive years (1990-92) and adipose-clipped pink salmon were captured in the commercial fishery. Tag codes were then analysed and assigned to the appropriate hydrocarbon treatment or control group. Results presented include the effects of WSF exposure on growth, hydrocarbon avoidance, cellular morphology, and differential mortality to adulthood.

Describes a new neighbourhood structure, embedded within a tabu search heuristic, for solving the vehicle routing problem with time windows. The tabu search exploits an adaptive memory that contains the routes of the best previously visited solutions. This memory is used to create new starting points for the tabu search by combining routes taken from different solutions represented in the adaptive memory. This approach is motivated by similar operators found in genetic algorithms, where two parent solutions are merged to create a new offspring solution. Computational results are reported for a number of standard test problems.

This study focuses on management issues associated with tourism and recreation use of the Tatshenshini-Alsek river system in north-western British Columbia. Study methodology included a review of relevant literature and government records, a visitor survey, a survey of the outfitters permitted to run trips on the river system, and a field study of physical condition and biophysical settings of campsites and recreation features along the rivers. The study results include information on historical trends and current patterns of commercial and recreational use of the rivers; an economic profile of recreational use, including revenues generated by outfitters and river-related spending in local communities; and an environmental profile of recreational use, describing known relationships between increasing levels of recreational use and both biophysical and social changes in the river environment. Finally, the study proposes a framework for managing growth in river recreation, including growth management strategies such as use limitation, trip scheduling, and cross-jurisdictional management.

This report outlines the first of three phases of a study being conducted to determine if a career and/or employment counselor training program might be developed and delivered through the universities. The first phase involved a questionnaire survey sent to 199 career/employment counsellors throughout New Brunswick. Survey questions related to the knowledge or competencies believed to be part of the function of a counselor, the present knowledge and competency base of counselors, kinds of training desired, the content of a curriculum for a counselor training program, and the degree of interest in credit for prior learning on the part of career/employment counsellors. The results point to the training needs of employers and counsellors in New Brunswick and lead to recommendations regarding the feasibility of establishing a training program at two of the province's universities. The appendix includes a list of career counseling competencies and a copy of the survey questionnaire.

MICROLOG 96-06333 (1 fiche)

Tree Farm Licence 26 is located to the north of Mission, British Columbia, and covers 10,414 hectares, of which 7,656 hectares are considered to be available for timber harvesting. After a brief description of the licence area, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the area and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the land base contributing to the timber harvest, existing forest inventory, expected rate of growth, regeneration delay, silvicultural systems, decay and waste, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, community dependence on the forest industry, and timber processing facilities. The appendix includes relevant sections from the British Columbia Forest Act.

Universal accessibility is a concept defined to meet the need of a varied client group, including people with functional limitations. This study had the goal of verifying the functionality of universal accessibility criteria used in building three multi-family housing projects. The study involved a survey of 67 tenants living in universally accessible units, in which the tenants were asked about their use, satisfaction level, and difficulties with the various architectural elements in the building and in the individual units. The study also proposes improvements to define new and better performing criteria.

With a significant reduction in grants to municipalities, the introduction of the National Infrastructure Program, the redefinition of some of Calgary's development charges, and its improving debt position, the City of Calgary undertook a re-examination of its longer-term capital investment and financing processes. This re-examination included meetings with City staff to identify capital needs, the drivers behind these investment requirements, the standards used to define the level of need and scope of projects, and ways of improving the capital budgeting and investment process. This report begins with a review of the collective vision for Calgary as articulated in several recent documents such as the Transportation Plan. It then examines capital investment requirements relating to both the existing infrastructure and that required to meet the needs of an expanding population. Subsequent chapters assess the current financial situation, future financing capacity, and alternative capital financing control mechanisms. The report concludes with recommendations regarding capital investment and financing.

Cette étude est réalisée pour savoir comment la faune utilise les bouquets formés d'arbres à cavités dans les parterres de coupes à blanc récentes en Nouvelle-Écosse dans le but d'établir si les bouquets sont utilisés et de déterminer les caractéristiques de la végétation qui influent sur cette utilisation. Les sites d'étude se situent dans la région centrale de la Nouvelle-Écosse; ils comportent 26 parterres de coupe à blanc âgés de 2 à 5 ans. La superficie de ces parterres atteint environ de 10 à 30 ha. Centre trente-deux bouquets, dont les caractéristiques suivantes varient, sont sélectionnés aux fins de l'étude : superficie, composition des essences forestières, taille et juxtaposition des arbres à l'intérieur des parterres de coupe. Les bouquets comportent au moins dix arbres et couvrent une superficie ne dépassant pas 2 ha.

Validation of a new genetically engineered bovine herpes virus as a safe vaccine for infectious bovine rhinotracheitis : final report

By J.A. Ellis, V. Misra and D.M. Haines. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1996. 15 p.
MICROLOG 96-06112 (1 fiche)

Bovine herpes virus type 1 (BHV-1) is an important pathogen of cattle, causing fatal systemic infections in the young, abortions in pregnant animals, and respiratory disease in animals of all ages. Live-virus BHV-1 vaccines have been found to be unsafe in young and pregnant animals. This report describes a study investigating the safety of a newly developed, genetically engineered, mutated BHV-1 virus. The mutated virus has a diminished ability to spread from cell to cell in tissue culture. In field experiments, the investigators administered the virus either intravenously or intranasally to unprotected calves less than 24 hours old and had complete post-mortem examinations for evidence of gross lesions. Tissues were also subjected to immunohistochemical testing. Comparisons are made to tests on calves inoculated with the non-mutated virus, and the results indicate whether there is a possibility of using the mutated BHV-1 to develop a safe vaccine.

Velvet antler production, prediction of weights and correct anaesthesia : final report

By J.C. Haigh. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1995. 6 p. : Ill.
MICROLOG 96-06110 (1 fiche)

Describes a study to search for indirect predictors of antler growth performance, to show the relationship between antler weights of immature and mature animals (wapiti and fallow deer), and to determine the distribution of nervous tissue throughout the antler structure. Information on antler yields and growth was obtained from a survey of wapiti producers, and nerve distribution was studied via dissection. Results presented indicate the usefulness of two year old antler weight as a predictor of antler growth performance. A recommendation is made regarding the method of anaesthesia for removal of antlers.

Vertical co-ordination and integration in the hog industry : a mechanism for growth : final report

By Gary G. Storey and Jeffrey M. Gillespie. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1996. 280 p. : Ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-06156 (3 fiche)

The purpose of this study is to determine the constraints to the economic development of the Saskatchewan pork industry, focusing on what is needed in terms of changes to industry organisation and institutional arrangements. Specific objectives included examination of alternative means of improving industry co-ordination through direct vertical integration; investigation of types of contractual relationships that will allow for market expansion and stability; and working out of a development plan for the pork industry. The first part examines the structure, operation, and performance of pork industries in other parts of Canada, Europe (Denmark, Germany, Brittany), and the United States, with an emphasis on how they carried out required production, processing, and marketing functions and to what extent they achieved the necessary co-ordination for efficiency. The second part develops institutional relationships between industry, government, and the research community that would be responsible for planning the growth in the Saskatchewan pork industry. It describes work conducted at strategic planning workshops, outlines proposals for industry development, and presents results of pork industry surveys.

The water plant optimisation study at the Dresden Water Treatment Plant was conducted as part of an ongoing process to provide a continuously updated base of information on the plant and water quality. The plant is located on the south bank of the Sydenham River in Dresden, Ontario and is a conventional sedimentation-filtration plant with a daily capacity of three megalitres. The river is the plant's water source and in recent years the plant has had problems meeting water demand and producing an aesthetically pleasing drinking water. In view of the fact that a pipeline supply from Lake Huron is being planned, the goal of this report is to emphasise short-term modifications to the Dresden plant to obtain optimum contaminant removal and disinfection. The focus is on modifications which can be, for the most part, completed quickly and economically. The report also includes a review of current plant processes, design data, operational practices, and plant performance.

Return-to-Work (RTW) programs in the Saskatchewan workplace are designed to allow all stakeholders in the workers' compensation system to achieve the goal of returning an injured worker to a safe and productive work environment as soon as medically possible. This booklet explains the benefits of RTW programs, outlines the responsibilities (of the worker, employer, and health care providers) for returning the injured worker to work, and describes how to develop a RTW policy and program as well as individual RTW plans.

Your safety program : a guide for developing an effective safety program in the workplace

Regina : Workers' Compensation Board, 1996. 36 p.
MICROLOG 96-06034 (1 fiche)

This publication is meant to provide Saskatchewan employers with essential information for designing and developing an effective workplace safety program, and preventing accidents and reducing the number of workplace injuries. Sections of the publication cover the rationale for establishing workplace safety programs, provincial and federal legislative requirements, management commitment to a safety program, hazard identification, safe work practices and procedures, training in work safety, communications regarding the safety program, accidents and their investigation, and review and evaluation of the safety program.

Canadian Index

A comprehensive index providing access to nearly 100,000 citations each year from: nine major daily newspapers, over 200 Canadian trade and business periodicals, over 50 specialized Canadian trade magazines for which indexing is unavailable elsewhere, and more than 350 general periodicals.

KIOSK: CBCA

KIOSK: CBCA is a reference tool which combines a high quality indexing and abstracting database (CBCA) with direct access to the fulltext content of the articles indexed.

CBCA Fulltext

CBCA Fulltext provides fulltext access to Canadian periodicals and current affairs information, and incorporates the largest and most-comprehensive subject guide to periodical literature. CBCA Fulltext allows searching on Windows, Macintosh, DOS and UNIX platforms.

CBCA OnDisc

CBCA OnDisc is the Knight Ridder CD-ROM version of the Canadian Index, giving you access to ten years of indexing. It includes every citation in the Canadian Index, plus thousands of informative abstracts which do not appear in the print edition.

KIOSK: Maclean's

Published in cooperation with Maclean's magazine, KIOSK: Maclean's contains every article and news report published by Canada's Weekly Newsmagazine over an eight year period.

CNI Clips: Press Clippings on Microfiche

CNI Clips is a unique service which provides the full text of more than 40,000 Canadian Press news stories and feature articles each year, and is delivered in a practical and economical microfiche format.

Canadian Education Index

Canadian Education Index covers more than 200 Canadian education periodicals, as well as reports and monographs from the educational research community across Canada. In addition, the Index covers report literature from government agencies, educational faculties and teachers' associations, and large school boards.

Canadian Education Index Thesaurus

Canadian Education Index Thesaurus is a bilingual controlled vocabulary of over 5,000 terms, developed for the indexing and retrieval of French or English-language material in Canadian education, and is an invaluable research aid for users of the Canadian Education Index.
